L. V. C. Grads Meet in Dayton Ohio

Alumni of College gather in Dayton
Y. M. C. A.

The following from the Dayton, Ohio, News is of special interest to L. V. because of her close relation to the participants in this pleasant social event.

A banquet and social evening was enjoyed Saturday evening in the Y. M. C. A. building by the students, graduates and friends of Lebanon Valley College, the eastern educational institution of the United Brethren churches, located at Annville, Pa. The event was the first of its kind ever given in this city, and was attended by about 30 guests, among whom were two former presidents of the college, Rev. C. J. Kephart and Prof. E. S. Lorenz.

Dr. S. D. Faust, of Bonebrake Theological Seminary, introduced President W. G. Clippinger, of Otterbein university, the toastmaster of the evening. An interesting, entertaining and instructive program followed, opened by Miss Gertrude Walmer, of Lebanon, Pa., who played the finale No. 2 from "Il Trovatore."

"Our Eastern College" was discussed by Rev. Arthur Clippinger, pastor of the Summit St. U. B. church, and Mrs. Mary R. Albert told of "Her Girls." Prof. J. B. Showers followed with humorous recitations about "Her Boys," after which Mrs. Lorene Bowman gave two pleasant readings, the second of which was an encore.

"Her Societies" was entertainingly described by C. W. Shoop, a student in Bonebrake Theological Seminary, and "Her Proselytes" was responded to by Dr. Golin. The program concluded with an address on "Lebanon Valley and Mission Work," delivered by R. P. Dougherty. Both ex-presidents present, Dr. Kephart and Prof. Lorenz, responded to the repeated calls with short addresses.

The following officers of the local alumni were elected: President, S. D. Faust; vice president, Miss Jessie Brane; secretary and treasurer, Dr. W. O. Fries. Two rousing college yells were given in closing.

Those present on Saturday evening were Dr. and Mrs. C. J. Kephart, Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Lorenz, Dr. and Mrs. C. I. B. Brane, Dr. and Mrs. S. D. Faust, Dr. and Mrs. Gohn, Prof. and Mrs. MacFadden, Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Fries, Rev. and Mrs. Arthur R. Clippinger, Miss Fischer, Miss Gertrude Walmer, Miss Sue Gabel, Miss Jessie Brane, Miss Justina Lorenz, Mrs. Mary R. Albert, Prof. J. B. Showers, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Shoop and Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Dougherty.

An interesting letter from Dr. Lawrence Keister, president of the college, was read during the meeting. Mr. Keister was unable to be present.

A similar organization formed in Lebanon county, on February 12, 1910, was the first of the kind established by Lebanon Valley College alumni anywhere.

Many of these people are well known here.

Correction

In a recent issue of the "News" a mistake was made in the list of C. L. S. officers. Sara Zimmerman's name should have appeared as critic and Edna Kilmer's, as Treasurer.

Oren G. Myers, '00, of Red Wood City, California, who visited friends at Annville, over the Christmas holidays has returned to his home, where he has extensive interests in oil wells. Mr. Myers is a loyal alumnus and entered his subscription to the "College News" in order that he might keep in touch with the progress of his alma mater.

Alumni

Earl E. Renn, '10, a student in the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, visited friends at the college on Wednesday.

Dr. and Mrs. D. Albert Kreider, of New Haven, Conn., were the guests of relatives in Annville during the holidays. Dr. Kreider graduated in 1892.

Prof. H. M. B. Lehn, '08, and wife, of Greenville, Pa., visited friends and relatives in Annville during the holidays.

H. K. Bomberger, '10, of Ligonier, spent several days of his vacation in Annville.

A. Louise Kreider, '08, conservatory, left on Wednesday morning for Wells College, accompanied by Miss Louise Frost, who was her guest over the holidays, at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Kreider, of Annville.

Miss Lucy Seltzer, '10, has been substituting in the Lebanon High School for several weeks.

Miss Ruth M. Hershey, '06, after spending her vacation at her home in Hershey, left on Monday morning for New York City, to continue her studies at Columbia University.

Editorial

The editors of the "College News" wish you all a happy and prosperous New Year. With the close of the holiday vacation began the winter term of our college year. We also have begun a new calendar year. With this new year comes increased opportunities and advantages. A retrospect of the past year will show each one lost opportunities and unimproved moments. It is to be hoped that each one will profit in the present year by seeing his errors in the one which has just become a matter of history.

In another column of this paper we acknowledge the gift of a file of valuable magazines which were presented to the college library by an alumnus. We are glad to see interest is being increased among the alumni, and hope that this is only the beginning of better things to follow from them for the welfare of their alma mater. We are glad for the magazines presented as they will fill a long-felt need in the History department. This gift is not the only one of its kind received from alumni, but, believe us, there is still room for more. We would suggest our alumni and friends to follow the example set by this worthy co-worker.

If you have magazines on file which you do not desire to keep permanently, magazines which are of interest to you and which would be to us, we ask you to send them to the Dean or directly to the Librarian. Due credit and acknowledgement of the same will be given. You may be able to fill a great need, just as in the present case. In no way can anyone show greater interest in, and loyalty to, the college than in remembering her in such ways as this. It is most encouraging, not only to the college authorities to receive them, but also to us as a student body to know that our predecessors in these College Halls have us and our welfare in mind, and are assisting us by every possible means.

Christian Association Joint Session

The year's work in the Christian Associations was begun in joint session of Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. W. A. Brunner led the meeting and spoke upon A WORTH-WHILE LIFE using Proverbs 10, as a scripture reference. He cited scripture to present the different phases of a life that will be worth while and acceptable to men and to God. He held up as an ideal for such a life the life of Christ because His life was a life of consecration, devotion, and service. In order that a life may be made most effective one must learn to judge the actions of men less harshly and to judge one's own life more harshly than one commonly does. A life worth while expresses itself a service to men and to God.

Miss Edna Kilmer, spoke upon the AMBITIONS OF A LIFE WORTH WHILE. S. O. Grimm spoke upon the FRUITS OF A LIFE WORTH WHILE. Miss Verda Snyder rendered a vocal solo.

Y. W. C. A. Entertains

On Saturday afternoon from two o'clock until four, the young Women's Christian Association gave a formal "Tea" in the reading room on the third floor of the Ladies' Dormitory.

This was the first social affair of this kind given by the Y. W. C. A. recently. It proved to be very successful, and was attended by a large number of members and friends of the Association.

Miss Edith McCurdy, a member of the class of 1911 in oratory, will be a resident student at the college during the remainder of the year.

Phares B. Gibble, a Senior Academy student, has been chosen to fill the charge of West Lebanon U. B. Chruch.

The appointment was formerly held by Mark G. Holtzman, who resigned the charge in lieu of Y. M. C. A. work in Lebanon.

W. L. Murray spent Monday evening and Tuesday in Duncannon.

Star Course

The Star Course Committee was obliged to announce immediately on returning to school that the entertainment to be given on Thursday evening by the Dudley Buck Company had to be postponed. This action was necessary on account of a member of the company being severely ill in the hospital.

The correct date for this number has not yet been announced.

It is to be hoped the public will not lose confidence in the course on account of this misfortune. The correct date will be announced in these columns as soon as possible.

Matters Historical

Commencement Exercises of 1869 as Reported in Contemporary Press

"The commencement exercises at Lebanon Valley College, at Annville on Tuesday last, were very interesting and highly creditable to that institution. The orations and essays were not of the sophomorical character, 'full of sound and fury, signifying nothing,' but abounded in good, common-sense ideas, chastely and well expressed. Among the other excellent productions was an essay by Miss Sallie Burns, on 'Woman,' which was very happily conceived and pervaded by original and sound suggestions. The music by the Singing Class of the College was excellent. The class contains some superior voices which have been neatly cultivated under the training of Prof. Hammond. Persons having children or wards to educate should visit and make themselves acquainted with the merits of this institution."

Large Crowd at Biological Field Club

Prof. Derickson Lectures on Trip to Jamaica

On Wednesday evening of last week, Prof. S. H. Derickson, heard of the Department of Biology, gave to the members of the Biological Field Club and visitors in attendance a most excellent and instructive lecture on his own observations concerning plant and animal life found in Jamaica, B. W. I., which he recorded during his recent stay on that island.

its contours, its temperature, the inhabitants and their occupation, and finally the tropical plant and animal life found there.

Prof. Derickson was in company with Dr. Johnson and a party of men from Johns Hopkins University and being concerned more particularly as to plant life, but little time was spent in the studying and collecting of animal material. However Professor told us of the many beautiful tropical birds found there, of the many varieties of lizards, that are present on the island. Besides the habits of the tropical ants and scorpions were discussed. Of all these and others not mentioned here for want of space, excellent specimens were produced by which he could verify his remarks.

As to the plant life of Jamaica, the ferns and mosses were found in the greatest abundance. He said that in the mountainous districts of the islands they occur in astonishing profusion and variety upon moist rocks and trunks of trees, as well as upon the earth. He said too, that one of the most attractive features of certain parts of the island is the giant tree fern with erect stems of palm-like appearance, which lift their great crowns of leaves twenty to thirty feet in the air. The lycopodiæ, cacti, coffee plants and scores of others were discussed and hundreds more were not taken up at all due to lack of time. These facts concerning plant life were made clear to every one by actual specimens. With the aid of the stereoptican, Professor threw on the screen, small mosses and ferns, otherwise unable to be demonstrated.

The lecture was excellent, and every member of the Club looks forward to another which we hope we can influence Prof. Derickson to give in the college chapel.

PROF. S. H. DERICKSON

The lecture was beyond doubt the best scientific production ever heard in the department and under the auspices of the Field Club. Besides going into a description relative to the habits and characteristics of the plants and animals found there, Professor displayed his fine collection of material, which made the lecture equally entertaining as well as instructive.

First, Jamaica was described as to

At the conclusion of the program in appreciation of Professor Derickson's excellent lecture, the members of the club tendered him a vote of thanks.

Star Course—Bishop Bell

On Saturday evening January 21, there will be given an opportunity for those who hold Star Course season tickets, to use them in a substitute-lecture to be given by Bishop Wm. M. Bell of the United Brethren Church. This lecture is to be substituted for the Dudy Buck Company, who failed to appear at the beginning of this month, owing to the sickness of one of its members.

The committee was extremely sorry not to be able to procure this splendid company of singers and entertainers, but it feels equally proud that it has succeeded in procuring the services of Bishop Bell as a substitution for that number. Bishop Bell will lecture on his famous subject, "American Pearls." Those of us who heard him at Mount Gretna last summer are keenly anticipating a treat. His lectures are always full of vim and power, every word weighty and striking.

No student should fail to attend this lecture, whether he has a season ticket or not.

Every student advertise this lecture, and see to it that Lebanon Valley and Annvile gives Bishop Bell a cheering reception.

DON'T FORGET, this lecture is a SUBSTITUTE for the last star course number which failed to appear. Season tickets admit. Admission 25 cents and 35 cents.

Editorial

Men have often been heard to say that life would not be such a bad and treacherous step if it were not for the final reckoning. Such men we have invariably branded as lacking some essentials.

Now it seems to be the feelings of not a few students that the real bugbear in the apprehension of learning is, the final-examination. This testing-machine has received such a scandalous reputation for taking the wrong stuff OUT of a man and putting correspondingly evil stuff IN him, that I doubt whether twenty-five per cent of students really do ever entertain a true idea of the purposes and possible value of an examination to a participant.

It is not the purpose of this editorial to thoroughly present and discuss the question, but merely to suggest some thoughts that might serve this privileged student-body in the grand feast between Jan. 22-27.

In one respect, a tough examination is as good for a man as a first class foot-ball game. It is a grand test of nerve composure and firmness. The man who can calmly anticipate an examination which promises to be searching, and refrain from spoiling his newly laundered cuffs or some bits of vest-pocket-sized paper specially measured and prepared for the event; the man who can keep those "stoppage" words to himself when he has discovered that he has copied the wrong thing, that man has as much nerve as it takes to tread the gridiron. This may be questioned by some, but those of us who have had the guilty pleasure of both, know how true it is.

If the energy that is wasted in toiling and sweating over the preparation of "trots" for examinations were directed towards an honest, determined and religious review of the subject, the student would do immeasurably more good for others and for himself.

If the time spent, during the examination in watching the vigilant eye of the professor whose duty it is to "watch and pray," were spent in answering the questions, there might be less need of teaching ethics in our institutions of learning.

It takes a good fellow to be a first class cheater, and instead of trying to depreciate the value of such a man, we wish by these few remarks to awaken the manhood that is in him and if possible, to help him direct his energies in the right channel for real power and worth.

In the coming examinations let us all unitedly stand up against the student who offers to aid or to receive aid. Let us bestow on such a menial, all the vindictive scorn and disgust that we possess. Let it never be said again that we can "slide through" at Lebanon Valley. What good would such an institution be to us? It is the students' business to suppress such a feeling if it ever exists. No faculty has ever succeeded in absolutely wiping out cheating, in examinations, but student-bodies have. It remains for us, then, as students to exterminate this evil. It is not for the faculty to do.

Mr. Chas. Brunner of New Bloomfield presented our museum with a very curious stone during the past week. It is of igneous formation with a hollow interior in which are several pebbles, which make it a natural rattle. Gifts of their kind are much appreciated by those in charge of the museum.

INTERESTING LECTURES

Prof. W. E. Coleman Talks on Social Ethics

College students and friends received a treat during the past week in the shape of four lectures in the College Chapel on Social Ethics. Prof. J. M. Coleman, of the Universities of Michigan and Bonn, Germany, delivered the lectures on "The State and Government," "The State," "The Church and Government," and "The Government and God." Prof. Coleman, who is especially well equipped for this kind of work, attracted large audiences at each of his interesting and instructive lectures.

Prof. Coleman is supported in his lecture work by his Church denomination which is particularly interested in various Church and Government topics.

Mr. Leister led the meeting on Sunday afternoon. His subject was the "Blessedness of affliction." In a simple and concerning way he showed the value of affliction. By quoting many references from the scripture and using many illustrations from life and Bible, he proved his argument.

The main points brought out were, that affliction teaches men the need of prayer, that it draws us nearer to Christ.

He pointed out that although the righteous and sinners usually have afflictions, yet the sinless are better able to bear their burden. The general discussion that followed was full of life and interest. The philosophical side of the question came in for a good deal of discussion. The meeting was well attended, and the spirit of devotion was manifest and the interest very good.

Ministerial Association

The first regular meeting of the College Ministerial Association was held on Thursday evening. The meeting was interesting, but not very well attended, owing to a number of the members being actively engaged in the regular evangelistic work for the winter. Most of these meetings are being very well attended, and good results are being obtained.

Rev. H. B. Spayd, the College pastor, read an interesting and instructive paper on "The Minister and his attitude toward Politics." The next meeting will be held on the first Thursday evening in the second semester.

Lebanon Co Alumni Banquet

The committee which has in charge the arrangements for the annual banquet of the Lebanon Valley College Association for Lebanon County held a meeting last week and outlined the plans for the banquet which will be held this year on February 13. The place has not yet been decided upon but will be selected shortly, when the committee will notify those graduates and former students living in the country, whose names they have. There are no doubt many persons who have at some time attended the college, about whom the committee does not know. If anyone knows of persons who did not receive notice of last year's banquet the committee would like to know of them. Elmer L. Haak, of Myerstown is the secretary.

Prominent speakers are being secured for the banquet.

Oratory Notes

Miss Adams, the head of the department, read before a ladies club of Lebanon, last week. She recited some poems of Browning and of Burns. Her work was splendidly received and Miss Adams was very enthusiastically entertained by the society.

The recital of the Oratory Department will take place Thursday evening January 26, in Engle Hall. It will consist of readings by several students, and a short humorous sketch. The participants have all been working hard and have spent a great amount of labor for this recital and we hope to give an interesting and entertaining program. It is hoped that the students of the college will attend and invite their friends.

The recently organized Reading Circle held its first meeting in the Y. W. C. A. reading room, last Thursday evening at six o'clock.

The attendance was excellent. Miss Bertha Spessard read aloud from the book entitled, "The Lady of the Decoration," by Frances Little. This is a story dealing with the experiences of a woman who was engaged in kindergarten work in Japan.

It aroused so much interest that it was agreed to devote a portion of the Sunday afternoon meeting to reading the book.

Miss Edna Yarkers who led the meeting on Sunday, conducted a short devotional service after which the rest of the time was given over to the "Lady of the Decoration."

Items of Interest

Miss Mary Nissley of Middletown spent several days here with her friends.

Prof. S. H. Shenk, spent Saturday in Philadelphia.

Prof. A. R. Spessard, of Mt. Hermon, Mass. sends word to the News that one of the largest buildings of Moody's School was lately burned to the ground.

Mr. Blazier, photographer from Lebanon, was on the campus on Monday taking photos of the buildings. These photos will be used for postcards.

Dr. W. O. Fries, of Dayton Ohio, a former student of Lebanon Valley, came to Annville on Saturday. He is sent here by the committee of church officers at Dayton, Ohio, to assist Rev. H. B. Spayd with evangelistic services of two weeks duration.

Bishop Bell Lectures on "American Perils"

A LARGE AND APPRECIATIVE AUDIENCE GREETS THE BISHOP

On Saturday evening last, in the Engle Conservatory, Bishop Wm. M. Bell of Los Angeles Cal., lectured on his celebrated subject, "American Perils." The Hall was packed almost to its limit with eager listeners from towns extending from Harrisburg to Reading inclusive.

The Bishop was received with an enthusiastic applause as he crossed the platform. In spite of the fact that he reached us after giving a series of fifteen addresses in five days, at Reading, he showed no signs of fatigue when he arose to address the audience.

BISHOP WM. M. BELL, D.D.

Starting calmly on the preliminary explanations of his talk, he steadily increased his ardor and vim until applause upon applause greeted each of his great and earnest statements. He talked for an hour and a half and only because he was obliged to leave on the 9:30 train, did the audience suffer the great Bishop to end his lecture.

The committee wishes again to state here that this lecture was given as a substitute for the Dudley Buck Co., which failed to appear at the scheduled time. However if it can possibly be arranged we will present that Company later. This of course cannot be guaranteed to our patrons, as yet but if successful, we shall announce it later.

The next number of the Star Course will be the celebrated Grand Opera Tenor Signor Bartilotti and his Company, on February 18, 1911.

Oratory Recital

The students of the Oratory department will appear in the first public recital under the direction of Miss Mabelle Adams on Thursday evening of this week in the College chapel. Each member has been working hard for this occasion, and an excellent program is assured. This recital will be given strictly by the students of the department, Miss Adams having no part to perform on the program.

This may be a disappointment to many, but we are glad to state that in all probability, Miss Adams will appear in a public recital in the College chapel in the near future. Further announcement will be made later.

Lebanon County Banquet

The Alumni of Lebanon County will hold their annual banquet on Monday evening, February 13, at Hotel Weimer, Lebanon. Excellent speakers have been procured for the occasion. Letters will be sent out this week to all persons whose names are in the hands of the committee in charge.

A single grateful thought toward heaven is the most complete prayer.—Lessing.

Destiny bears us to our lot, and destiny is perhaps our own will.—Disraeli.

Calendar.

The present week finds us at the middle of our course for the year. With this turning point come the dreaded examinations. Dreaded by some, I say, but hailed with a certain degree of delight by others. If we have been faithful in the regular routine of work during the semester, there should be little need for cramming. And if we have not kept up to our standard of work, and thus fall short in this, the day of reckoning, we know full well who is to blame.

But we would not speak especially of examinations this week. We are about to begin the work of the new semester. With some of us it is the entering of the last lap on the home stretch; with others it is only the real beginning of the race. Every one from the lowest class in the Academy to the senior in College is supposed and expected to put forth his best effort in this great race for character, for manhood, for womanhood. It is to be hoped that no one will fall behind, "break," or be out-distanced in the splendid race this year, but rather that all come in strong and with renewed energy, striving always for the best there is in a college course. Let each one take a firm hold on each opportunity, whether it be in College work, Society or Christian Association, and make the best use possible of it. In this way, when the race is finished, we can at least feel that we have put forth our greatest effort, and that we have run a good race in so far as we were able.

"He that cannot reason is a bigot, he that dare not reason is a salve, and he that will not reason is a fool." This is a statement of Andrew Jackson. Now we all know that "Andy" was a hot headed man and yet in many of his fiery statements there is more than a grain of truth.

Every one of us have at some time or other had dealings with individuals who set up their own opinions as the highest ideal and stubbornly stick to these in spite of the fact that nearly every one upholds the opposite view. Is such action reasonable or is it just? Is it not better to take advantage of the wind sometimes and step clear of the shoals?

There are many people who go through life grumbling about things and always looking thru dark glasses. Why not change the color and have a bright prospect? Take a little time now and then to reason matters out and maybe the fault will be found at your own door. Let every fellow who finds himself disposed to knocks at things generally, make one application of "Andy's" philosophy and find in which class he really belongs. This may make the coming semester the most cheerful one of your college career and your whole life brighter. If you can't boast, Don't Knock.

Y. M. C. A.

The meeting on Sunday was led by Warren Hayes. His subject was "Prayer," and he gave us a review of the value of prayer. President Keister was present and made an address upon the same subject. He said that we should never undertake anything with the hope of being successful without offering up a prayer to God. F. R. Kennedy and W. A. Brunner gave some personal experiences pertaining to the subject.

There was a rather slim attendance at the meeting for which we are very sorry and we hope for a larger audience next Sunday.

ment of public speaking, at present Prof. of Public Speaking and Shakespeare in Pittsburg High School, which position he has filled with credit for the past six years, will deliver a Lecture-Recital on "The Merchant of Venice" at Massanutten Academy, Woodstock, Virginia, about the middle of April. Professor Beatty was Professor of English in Massanutten Academy the year following his graduation from L. V. C. leaving that position to accept the one which he now holds.

An effort is being made to arrange with Prof. Beatty to render his Lecture-Recital at our college some time in April.

A friend of the "College News" has recently received a communication from Prof. H. H. Baish, '01, Superintendent of the department of Education, Altoona, Pa., in which he expresses his interest and appreciation of the "News" and sends kind regards and good wishes to all his college friends.

The treasurer of the alumni association is preparing some statistics concerning the finances of the Association which he expects to publish in "The News" together with a list of the members of the association who have paid their annual dues in full. Don't you want your name to appear in this list?

Conservatory Notes

Among those who attended the "Nordica" Recital at the Majestic theater, Harrisburg, on Thursday evening were Prof. and Mrs. Sheldon, Miss Brown, Miss Sara Strickler, '12, and Harry Ulrich.

Miss Ora Bachman, 11, expects to fill the position as organist of the local U. B. Church by the first of February.

Mrs. F. S. Wagonseller and son are the guests of Prof. and Mrs. Sheldon.

Miss Alice Musselman, of Philadelphia, is spending a few days with Miss Ethel Brown.

Misses Naomi Ely and Evelyn Weidman, spent Thursday evening in Palmyra as the guest of Miss Eva Foltz.

Fair autumn days are past and o'er,

But never a care have we;
For we fill the hours with richest lore,

In the halls of L. V. C.

The cold winds of winter will come and go,

Yet never a care have we;
The joy of learning keeps hearts
aglow,
In the halls of L. V. C.

Sweet spring will smile then step aside,

And never a care have we.
Perennial Spring must never abide,
In the halls of L. V. C.

The voice of Summer will scatter us

Still never a care have we;
For naught on earth can our hearts
debar,

Miss Edna Kilmer led the meeting on Sunday afternoon. She took for her subject "The Marks of a Christian." After reading a short scripture lesson, she read extracts from an article by Charlotte Adams, on "The Marks of a Christian." The leader then commented on the article emphasizing particularly the thought that a Christian's Marks must be visible and easily recognized. The Christian himself is the human embodiment of his faith.

Mr. Kreider is a member of the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees of Lebanon Valley College.

The Spendthrift Muses

He slaved along for several years
And made a little money,
He had a host of woes and fears,
But saved a little money;
He never had the time to spend
An evening with some cheerful friend
He kept on toiling to the end
And saved a little money.
He died last week, and folks now say
He saved a little money;
Nobody mourns although he may Have saved a little money;
I hope that when I come to die
Folks will not sorn me where I lie,
Therefore, old scout, I shall not try
To save a little money.

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Will You Be at the Banquet?

If there are any alumni or former students of the college living in Lebanon County, who have not received a letter concerning the Lebanon County banquet, which will occur on February 13, at the Hotel Weimer in Lebanon, they will please send their names to the secretary of the organization, Elmer L. Haak, Myerstown, Pa., at once. Responses to the letters that have been sent out are already coming in and the prospects are that there will be a larger number of people at the banquet than last year. Be there yourself and urge others to attend. Do not wait until it is too late to send in your order and your money. All requests for places at the banquet should be sent to the secretary or a member of the committee not later than February 8. Don't wait. Do it now.

Rev. S. K. Wine Passes to Rest

We are sorry to note the death of Rev. S. K. Wine A.M., '81, which occurred at his home at Fayetteville Saturday January 21. Rev Wine entered the ministry immediately after graduation as a member of the Virginia Conference of the United Brethren church in which conference he served faithfully until three years ago when he was transferred to the Pennsylvania Conference of the same church. Since then his efforts have not slackened and death found him an active worker in the cause he loved so well. Rev. Wine gave to his chosen profession a devotion and zeal, which commanded the respect and love of all and rewarded his efforts with a most commendable degree of success.

A wife son and daughter survive him to whom we offer the heartfelt sympathy of his Alma Mater.

Oratory Recital

The department of oratory at the college gave an interesting recital to an appreciative audience on Thursday evening in the auditorium of the conservatory. The program showed that great care was used in choosing the selections and this fact made it very entertaining to every one present. Their was noticed a marked improvement in the delivery of each performer, which speaks well for the management of the department.

The oratory department of the college has proven a good asset since it has been so successful during the past several years. All persons who can, should take lessons in public speaking. The following program was rendered;

Piano—Polonaise in C sharp minor, Chop, Miss Marion Light; "Gentlemen, the King!", Robert Barr, John W. Ischy; Nydia—(Selection from Last Days of Pompeii), Bulwer Lytton Helen E. Brightbill; (a) "My, Shadow" (b) The Lamplighter, Robert Louis Stevenson, Grace Smith; The Prodigal Son, Richard Harding Davis, Verda Snyder; Piano—Air de Ballet, Mozkowski, Miss Ruth Engle; Convict B 606, Annie Hamilton Donnell, Edna E. Yarkers; The Finish of Patsy Barnes, Paul Laurence Dunbar, Nona Downey Hockenbury; Dramatic Sketch—Palmistry Study, Irene Stoddard Capwell, Kathryn—Helen L. Weidler, Jack—John W. Ischy.

Mathematical Round Table

The regular monthly meeting of the mathematical round table will be held Wednesday night February 1, at which the following program will be rendered.

Class Room Use of the Slide Rule, R. B. Saylor; Squaring the Circle, Earl Loser; Some Properties of the Nine Digits, Edna Yarkers. Visitors are invited to attend.

Calendar.

Tuesday January 31, 6 p. m.—Students Prayer meeting.

Wednesday, February 1, 7 p. m.—Mathematical Round Table.

Friday, February 3, 7:15 p. m.—Societies.

Sunday February 5, 1 p. m. Christian Associations.

Alumni

Prof. and Mrs. C. H. Fisher, '04, and son of York Pa., visited Mrs. Fisher's father Asaph S. Light, Lebanon, over Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. W. O. Fries, '82, of Dayton, Ohio, conducted chapel exercises on Friday morning and made some very interesting remarks. Rev. Fries has made many warm friends among the members of the student body. We are exceedingly glad for the interest he has manifested in his Alma Mater. These marks of interest on the part of the alumni, strengthen the ties of affection that bind us to our College.

Rev. W. O. Fries, left for his home in Dayton Ohio, on Sunday evening after a very successful season of energetic Evangelistic work in the local U. B. church. The best wishes of the student body attended him.

Miss Edith Frantz '08 Conservatory, will appear in an entertainment given by the Hahn Quartette in the P. O. S. of A. all Lebanon on the evening of February 2 '11.

Mrs. Geo. D. Gohn '92, of 1023 South Wayne Ave., Dayton, Ohio, is at present confined to her room helpless with a fractured spine the result of a fall received January 4. The "News" extends to her the sympathy of her Alma Mater.

Editorial

The recent disturbance in the men's dormitory is not an outgrowth of bad conditions of life there, as may be supposed, but only an expression of the urgent need of effective student government. It is a decided mistake to allow the impression that conditions there are immoral to be circulated, an error that cannot be corrected too speedily.

Conditions in the dormitory have never been better in the history of the institution. This is not the opinion of some chicken-hearted prep or freshman who has felt a little fear because some wholesome advice or stinging rebuke has been administered, but the honest opinions of those students who have known the place for a long period of years and know whereof they speak.

There is no evil there that could not be entirely removed if student government were effected. By student government we do not mean a systematic way of tattling, but a system by which all minor offenders would be punished by the governing body and the more serious offenders handed to the faculty for action.

If such form of government as the recent student committee was striving to effect were adopted every student would secure justice, no one would be requested to stoop to the plane of a tattler and all offenders would be summarily dealt with, and scarcely any trouble would devolve upon the faculty and authorities of the institution. In fact it would stop most offenses in the very beginning and bring perfect order out of chaos.

No one can expect a man who has any desire to keep his standing with the student body to tattle every little offense to the authorities. This is decidedly against any standard of college ethics. Even if the informer's convictions are conscientious, he places himself in a position in which his future influence is marked. All this can be removed by proper student government. Why not have it?

A few weeks ago Prof. J. M. Coleman in addressing the student body emphasized the statement, that students should not work too hard and that they should try to disillusionize their parents and friends concerning the great amount of work that they are compelled to do.

The address was unique and interesting and will long be remembered by those who heard it. The keen wit and humor of the Professor drove some wholesome thoughts into the mind of the loafer and plainly showed him the goal toward which such habits tend.

There is another danger however toward which we may move with even more disastrous effect and that is the extreme grind. Doubtless the Professor had this in mind as well as its opposite.

Some students seem to think that to make an A in exams is the highest ideal. To this they bend all their energies, burn the midnight light and spend the hours which should be used in healthful recreation in the close confinement of their own room pouring over books until their eyes grow weary and their mind becomes cloudy. A student may stand this a part of, or even during all his college course without any apparent physical harm, but even then he has missed the greater part of a college course, the association with a body of men, whose ideals are the highest.

Of course by men of high ideals we do not mean men with saintly smile or servile nature, but we mean men who will have convictions and dare to express them. They may be in opposition to some other fellow's view, but does that condemn them? It is this clashing of ideals that makes men, and a man of that kind even if he does make a little noise occasionally is worth as much to any school as twenty men who pen themselves in their rooms and get a nervous shock each time they hear a footstep outside.

The man who looks at exams in a philosophical way does not see a nightmare in them. He has his fun and in the end makes as good marks as the grind. His personality is much stronger and even if in the eyes of some conservatives he is a rascal and one to be curbed and "disciplined" he will eventually prove his worth. We need pilots as well as ballast in the great voyages of life.

"Duty Under Difficulty" was the subject discussed in the Sunday afternoon meeting. Miss Bertha Spessard led the meeting. She showed very clearly and forcibly the difficulties to be overcome by the Christian in the performance of her duty. She emphasized the importance of engaging in Christian warfare as a good soldier of Christ Jesus.

In the discussion which followed many excellent thoughts were presented among other things, the following beautiful quotation from Emerson was quoted:

So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,
When Duty whispers low 'Thou

The Youth replies, "I can."

Another impressive thought brought out was that faithful performance of duty means friendship with Christ. Jesus said "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I have commanded you."

The spirit of the meetings lately has been fine. Girls lets make the attendance better too.

Conservatory Notes

The seniors of the conservatory played for the chapel services during the past week.

It is urged that the music students attend the "Hahn Quartette" concert. The leader of this quartette is professor of violin in a Philadelphia school. Miss Edith Frantz, '08, will be their soloist.

A number of the conservatory students have been ill during the week and were unable to report at classes.

Miss Helen Brightbil is spending the week end at Tremont.

Don't mind the rain, "Get Busy," Recital season is fast approaching and we want to make this one the best the conservatory has ever had.

Y. M. C. A.

We were very much disappointed in not having Dr. W. O. Fries to address the meeting on Sunday. Dr. Fries was not able to attend and we realize that we have missed a rare treat. When it was learned that the speaker could not come, the meeting was directed by Titus Leibold, a member of the devotional committee. Mr. Leibold took for his subject "Conformity to The Religion of Jesus Christ," and used as a scripture lesson a portion of Romans 12.

Dr. Kiester was present and gave us a good talk upon the subject. He said in part. Truth is in divine harmony with the will of God, God is the primal cause of all you see. Go to the centre. Be built from within. One's outside life is but an expression of the inner life. Man is a unitary being and as such needs the greatest possible care. The little child may be most beautiful thing in the world but it is but the unfolding of this unitary being. The thing for man to do is to go alone somewhere and consecrate himself to God and His service

The discussion of the subject continued and was very interesting to all. We are glad to see such an interest manifested as was shown in the consideration of this great subject

Mathematical Round Table

The regular monthly meeting of the Mathematical Round Table was held on Wednesday evening February 1st in Prof. Lehman's lecture room. A very interesting program was rendered to the great delight of all present. Roger B. Saylor, president of the Round Table gave us an illustrated talk upon "Class-Room Use of the Slide Rule." Many of us had never seen such a contrivance and were greatly benefited by the careful clear explanation of its practical use. This was followed by a splendid discussion of that old problem of "Squaring the Circle" by Earl Loser. Miss Edna Yarkers gave us new and peculiar instances of special "Properties of the Nine Digits." We were surprised at the strange and almost impossible things can apparently be done by different manipulations of these nine figures. The whole program was decidedly the best that has been given this year.

Following the program the Round Table proceeded into business session. The following officers were elected: President, Artus O. Kauffman; Vice President, Samuel O. Grimm; Secretary, Edith Lehman; Treasurer, Paul Loser. It was decided to begin preparations for a special anniversary occasion instead of our regular program next month.

Social

The party on Saturday evening, given in the college parlors by the ladies of the dormitory was one of the most enjoyable social events of the college year. The reception was held in honor of Miss Mary B. Musser, a member of the class of 1910 and now teaching Latin, French and Music in the High School at Clayton, N. J.

The evening was pleasantly spent in playing games of various kinds. There were quite a number of guessing contests which furnished much amusement for the ladies and gentlemen in attendance. The lucky contestants were awarded handsome and appropriate prizes. They were: Messrs. John Karl Lehman, '11, Warren Hayes, '14, and Miss Edith Morrison, '14.

After the elegant refreshments were served, Earl A. Speessard, '11, enlivened the occasion by playing on the piano many of our familiar college songs. Miss Brown instructor in voice, and Miss Musser the guest of honor, followed with vocal solos, while Miss Adams, head of the department of oratory gave two splendid and interesting readings.

Conservatory Notes

Prof. and Mrs. Sheldon, Miss Brown and a number of conservatory students attended the concert given by the "Hahn Quartette" of Philadelphia.

Misses Naoma Ely and Evelyn Weidman, are spending the week end at their homes.

Mr. James Balthaser, former student of the conservatory, spent a few days with friends here.

At a recent business meeting the Senior class elected the following officers for the second semester: President, J. K. Lehman, Vice President, W. O. Ellis, Secretary, P. R. Koontz.

Editorial

Lebanon Valley has had its weaknesses, does have today. But what college has not! Many a college that became heir to as dark vicissitudes as has ours, has died and today we no more hear of them. Thanks to the powers that have kept us from a funeral. Who does not know that it often takes the sacrifice of generation after generation to establish a reputation that has once been juggled with?

What is our joy then, when we see some real and valuable improvements presented. Not a worthy and honest student failed to secretly cry hurrah! when the absence rules were lately announced. Every one feels today that this step is decidedly up to date and that the lack of absence limitations is a silly mistake for us to tolerate when we are able to enforce them. The student who forms the evil habit of absenting himself from recitation whenever he feels so disposed, finds himself quite unable to bind himself to rule when later in life he is put on his own initiative.

Many students who have spent several years at Lebanon Valley and have fallen into this so open habit, will experience some disappointment and perhaps chagrin because of the late restrictions, but let them be a little more alert to their duty towards the welfare of the whole mass of students. And as students eager to do the right thing for our college, we gladly and cheerfully promise our best care to follow these new laws, because we believe in them; but we also hope that those whose power it is to reprimand and punish, will be patiently indulgent toward our weaknesses. We have some of us, formed the evil habit that was so open and free to us, but we are not infallible in attempts at correction. Every student hails with delight any sensible attempt to establish law and order at this institution, and not one will murmur if he is sent home on account of fifteen unexcused absences, for then he will be conscious of a just cause for such a punishment.

We fondly anticipate many more such gradual and sound efforts at improvement of the name and character of our alma-mater and promise our heartiest support of any other step that may in the future be taken as sensible as was this last.

Inter-Collegiate Prohibition Contest

One year has elapsed since a secretary of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association called together those students of our college, who were interested in a study of the liquor question, considered as a social problem. A local organization with an enrollment which was a credit to our college was effected, under the constitution of the intercollegiate prohibition association. We took our place in the rank with the other colleges, as the baby league: yet, we won at the state contest (held at Albright College) several months later, an honor for our alma mater.

If we should review the purpose of this association of national importance, we would emphatically emphasize, that it is not to try to help wipe out and abolish the saloon by any big stick method, and then, by mere insane, intoxicating enthusiasm and irrational means, hope to realize an Utopian state, where we may rest on feathery beds of ease; but the reason that this association has been organized in the American colleges, and backed by men of wealth, influence, and integrity, is just to create among the students of our American colleges and universities, an intense and sane INTEREST, in the liquor problem that is confronting our nation to-day. Then second, to awaken in the college student of America an alive patriotism for his country, that will stimulate in him a keener sense of is duty to his God, and his obligation of service to his fellowmen; and as a natural sequence of all, to arouse in him a deep heart felt interest in WORKING OUT the most sane, rational and practical SOLUTION of the liquor problem.

Is the liquor problem, in its very nature, broad and vital enough to deserve any of our time or consideration, from a moral economic and social standpoint? Should the saloon be a licensed institution? Is prohibition a solution for the problem? If not what better solution would you suggest? Such is the character of the many questions that are envolved in the solution of the liquor problem.

As one of the means to the end, each year there are held by the intercollegiate association, four series of oratorical contest:—the local, state, interstate and national contests. The prizes for the locals are determined, by the different local leagues; The state first-prize is $50; Interstate first-prize $150, and the National prize $500.

The winners of the local contest of each state, contend in their respective state contest for the state prizes. The winners of the state contests, meet in several different interstate contest. (The first prize of each contest is $150.) The winners of the interstate contests test in a national contest for the $500 prize. Throughout the series of contests, each winning orator uses the same oration (with probably a few changes) that he delivered at the first contest of the series.

Mr. Amos Weigle, L. V. C., '12, had the honor of winning Pennsylvania's $50 prize, and hence, was her representative in the interstate contest.

We have the honor of entertaining this year the state contest and convention at Lebanon Valley College. The exact date for the contest, has not been determined but it will fall between April 16th and May 1st.

We ask for the loyal support and hearty cooperation of not only the members of our league, but we ask the same of the President and Faculty of our institution, of every loyal son, daughter and friend of L. V. C., in order that this contest and convention may be a great success, and that our visitors may experience while within the walls of our institution, that old Lebanon Valley spirit. Let us give them nothing less than the same hospitable reception that every visitor delegate, and orator received at the state contest held last year at Albright College.

All students desiring to enter this contest report not later than February 10th to Lester L. Spessard. There will be no local contest, our orator will be chosen from the applicants, by the league together with the suggestion of an impartial committee.

Ministerial Association

The regular meeting of the College Ministerium was held Thursday evening in the Men's Dormitory. The attendance was large, and the interest good. Besides routine business, officers were elected for the second semester. The paper of the evening was read by W. L. Murray, and was much appreciated. Prof. Shroyer was present and made appropriate remarks. An effort is being made to have a minister from Lebanon address the next meeting, which will be held February 16. The officers elected were: President, P. R. Koontz; Vice President, A. S. Beckley; Secretary, W. L. Murray; Treasurer, G. L. Blouch.

Woman's Board

The Woman's board of Lebanon Valley College met last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. H. H. Shenk. A large number were present, and plans discussed for a concert to be given some time in March by the music and oratory students for the benefit of the Board's funds.

Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.

The monthly joint session of the Christian Associations was held in the assembly room of the Carnegie Library on Sunday afternoon. A large number of students were present to enjoy the well prepared program. The meeting was in charge of J. C. Shively, whose brother, Rev. B. F. Shively, is at present in the Japan mission fields. Mr. Shively very ably traced the U. B. missionary movement in Japan from its beginning up to the present. I. A. Rodes rendered a very beautiful solo entitled "O Master Takes us Through the Gates." Miss Lehman read an interesting paper on "The Condition of Missions in Japan." She showed the difficulty of civilization in gaining its first foothold, and the present strife between Buddhism and Christianity. However wherever the Y. M. C. A. has taken a hold, it has gained largely over Buddhism. The Bible has been in Japan for a period of twenty years. At present there are about a million people reading Japanese Bibles. Miss Lehman reminded us that the U. B. missionary movement in Japan was started in 1895 by a former Lebanon Valley student.

C. E. Rettew made a short address on "The Needs of Mission in Japan." He said the missions need our sympathy in prayers and money. The church should gain over the population. The need of more and better education was also emphasized.

LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE

Volume II.

Annville, Pa., Tuesday, February 14, 1911

No. 19

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Second Annual Banquet Lebanon Co. Association

The second annual banquet of the Lebanon Valley College Association for Lebanon County was held at Hotel Weimar, Lebanon, Monday evening, February 13, 1911, with an attendance of seventy-four persons. The Association is composed of the Alumni and former students of Lebanon Valley residing within the county. The banquet hall was elaborately decorated with college colors, palms and cut flowers, and presented a beautiful appearance.

The Association was reorganized at this time with the election of the following officers: President, Prof. E. M. Balsbaugh, Principal of Lebanon High School; Vice President, Prof. A. E. Shroyer, Prof. of Bible and Greek, Lebanon Valley College; Secretary Treasurer, Elmer Haak, Myerstown.

A most pleasing feature of the occasion was the splendid menu which was served, which was as follows:

Oyster cocktails
Oysterettes	Horseradish
Bisque of tomato
Salted almonds	Celery
Salted peanuts	Olives
Broiled fresh shad
Pommes monoplane
Roast young turkey	Cranberry sauce
Bermuda potatoes	Pettis pois
Candied sweet potatoes
Punch a la Lebanon Valley
Chicken salad
Neufchâtel cheese	Saratoga crackers
Neapolitan ice cream
Marble cake
Fruit
Coffee

After the inner man was cared for, Prof. H. H. Shenk took matters in hand as Toastaster for the occasion. He very ably introduced each of the speakers who answered toasts which were much appreciated by every one present. Dr. Lawrence Keister, President of Lebanon Valley College, spoke on "The Biggest Thing I Know." The "Thing" emphasized was the immediate need of the college, namely, a Gymnasium, a larger endowment, and a larger student-body and faculty. All these are not only immediate, but also possible needs. David W. Siegrist, Editor of the Lebanon "Report," was next introduced, and spoke on "The Times and the Man." His main thought was that as the times advance over years past, so men must advance to cope with the perplexing situations. The last speaker of the evening was John R. Geyer, Esq., '98, whose subject was "The Alumnus in Dauphin." Mr. Geyer kept his audience in a continual roar with his keen wit and humor.

Every person present agreed that this occasion was in every way a success, and instrumental for the betterment of Lebanon Valley College.

The following is a list of the persons present:

Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Keister, Prof. and Mrs. Balsbaugh, Prof. and Mrs. Shenk, John R. Geyer, David W. Siegrist, Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Esbensen, Mrs. Aaron Kreider, Dr. and Mrs. Brunner, M.P. Masquerade Party

The annual Masquerade given by the Kalozetean Literary Society on St. Valentine's Day will be observed February 14, in the halls of the society. Judging from previous years and from the prospects for this year the event will be well attended by the student body and by numerous visitors from the neighboring towns.

The society is putting forth every effort to make it a success. Two hundred and fifty invitations were mailed to the numerous friends of the college.

The decorating committee is at work on the hall, while the entertainment for the occasion has by no means been neglected. Prizes will be offered for the most original and unique costumes. Refreshments will be served. Everyone is invited to attend. Come and identify your friends.

Editorial

During the present month we celebrate the birthdays of some of the greatest men America ever produced. Their lives and memories are brought before us with renewed force, and we are glad for all they have meant to us and to our country. Not only from a military and diplomatic standpoint, but from a literary as well, has the month of February been kind to us.

We admire the farsightedness and courage of the man who, in the face of the greatest difficulties and under the most trying circumstances, became the hero of Valley Forge. Other men have also been of value to our beloved country, and yet, considering them all, who would suppress a "hurrah," or fail to lift his hat high, were General Washington to pass by?

Then, too, in the terrible crisis of the Civil War, the famous "Rail-splitter" forged to the front. It was Abraham Lincoln who piloted the Ship of State through the stormy seas which were to tell "whether that nation or any nation so conceived, and so dedicated can long endure." When foreign nations seemed opposed to his measures, and his army was being hard pressed, it was his true manhood and perseverance which encouraged the Boys in Blue to press on to victory. His memory is still more sacred to us because of his premature death caused by the bullet of the cruel assassin.

In our list of great men this month comes the name of Horace Greeley. Much of his strength lay in his powers as a journalist. As father of the "New York Tribune" he was a firm supporter of Lincoln and the Union. He is also noted as being one of the founders of the Republican party.

February also presents us with a great military leader of later date than Washington in the person of William Tecumseh Sherman. Severe was the criticism on his famous march, but possibly without it and its results, the cause of the Union would have been lost. We admire him for his generalship, for he was a born leader of men.

We turn now from the paths of war and statesmanship to a quieter walk in life, and the portrait of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow is brought before our eyes. Although all his works are not great as literary productions, yet they contain much that is beautiful, and much that is given place in the hearts of the American people.

Each of these men surely had their faults, as each of us have, and that is human. Overlooking them, however, there is much in the lives of every man mentioned which we can extract and embody in our own characters.

Alumni

Prof. Jesse M. Hostetter, '05, is principal of the Avonmore, Pa., High School. We are glad to learn that Prof. Hostetter has regained sufficient health to engage in active educational work again. For two years after graduation he was unable to assume active duties owing to ill health. He has shown his loyalty to his Alma Mater by sending in a list of the members of his senior class, a number of whom he is urging to attend Lebanon Valley next year.

Mrs. George D. Gohn, '92, of Dayton, Ohio, whose serious accident was noted in these columns a few weeks ago, is again able to be about the house. We hope for her speedy recovery.

Dr. Donald J. Cowling, '02, President of Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., is in the midst of a canvassing campaign for an endowment of $600,000. The "NEWS" wishes him the greatest success.

F. Allen Rutherford, '10, a medical student at Johns Hopkins University writes that work is going well in preparation for a series of examinations to be given in March.

Wilber E. Harnish, '10, writes that there are 140 students in the High School at Cass City, Mich., where he is teaching mathematics and science, and directing athletics. Mr. Harnish reports the work going well, and sends best wishes to all his college friends.

George N. Hoffer, '09, has been given charge of the work in Plant Physiology and Plant Diseases at Purdue University. His work in this department will be largely with members of the Senior class of the University.

Thos. F. Miller, '01, is at present with Underwood and Underwood, of New York City, representing the Underwood Travel System.

Prof. Andrew Bender, '06, is completing ten hours' work with honors in the graduate department of Columbia University. Aside from this work he is also conducting the work in Mechanics in the Jersey City High School. At present Prof. Bender is working on Enzymes, one of the hardest subjects in Organic Chemistry, and also has the privilege of performing his experiments in the private laboratory of Dr. Nelson.

Miss Connie Oldham, '08, conservatory, was married recently to Mr. T. R. Reynolds. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds are at home at Gregory, S. D.

Roy J. Guyer, '08, Physical Director of the Marshalltown, Iowa, Y. M. C. A., reports his work going very well. He has renewed his subscription to the "NEWS" which he says he enjoys reading very much.

Dr. M. W. Brunner, '01, of Lebanon, was a college visitor on Monday afternoon.

Grover C. Bair, '10, who was employed at the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. is at present assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Lorain, Ohio.

Y. M. C. A.

There was a very interesting session of the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday. The leader for the afternoon was Mr. John Lehman and his subject was "Walking in the Light." He showed in a pleasing manner the nature of light and illuminated his talk with many passages from the scriptures. The leader pointed out the way in which we may try to live the perfect life.

We must get under God's light. By this means we may be kept from falling; it will keep us on the path that leads to the Eternal City. If we should get off the path this same light may aid us to regain the road to Eternal Life. An interesting discussion followed bringing out many valuable thoughts. These meetings are valuable and should be better attended.

Sophs Entertained

A most pleasant bit of class loyalty and good fellowship was shown last Wednesday evening when Paul Loser, '13, entertained his class at his home on Main Street. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by every one present. The evening was spent in various games and amusements. The rooms at the Loser home were most tastefully decorated in the class colors, crimson and steel. Elegant refreshments were served at a reasonable hour. Before leaving all joined heartily in a number of college songs and yells.

Y. W. C. A.

The hour on Sunday afternoon was very profitably spent by the members of the Y. W. C. A. in listening to Miss Clippinger read from "The Woman who Toils" by Mrs. Van Vorst.

This book contains the personal experiences of the author, who disguised herself as a factory girl and obtained work in various factories in different parts of the United States.

Miss Clippinger read parts of Mrs. Van Vorst's experience in southern cotton mills. It was intensely interesting, and set forth clearly the real life of the mill workers.

Lebanon County Club

On Saturday evening last, the Lebanon County Club was entertained by the ladies of the club. The soiree was held in the Carnegie Library Building from eight o'clock until ten-thirty. Many amusing games, native to the local county were played, and the old German songs were sung. Refreshments were served as at a German picnic.

The social was entirely informal and of the forty guests present, all spent an exhilarating and happy evening.

Washington's Birthday

February twenty-second will be observed as a general holiday at the college this year. No classes will recite, but instead, special exercises will take place in the College Chapel under the direction of those students who are taking the Historical-Political Group. The exercises will be held at 10:00 a. m. Come and bring your friends. An interesting program is being prepared.

Kalo Masquerade

The masquerade party held by the Kalozetean Literary society in their halls proved a success and was attended by over two hundred students and friends. Many people from Lebanon and vicinity as well as former students from a good distance were in attendance, which made the occasion a more pleasant one.

At about eight o'clock on Tuesday evening the masquers appeared in their ridiculous attires. The costumes varied from the silks work in colonial times to the quaint old negro fashions still prevalent in this country. The majority of those attending the party wore costumes from their own pattern. Prizes consisting of a Lebanon Valley seal watch fob and a Lebanon Valley seal pennant were awarded to Earl Loser, '13, and to Helen Brightbill respectively for the unique and original costumes.

Those not receiving prizes but deserving honorable mention were: Misses Risser, Frantz, Turbe, Detweiler, Meyer and Bomberger, Messrs. Richie, Frantz and Arndt.

Miss Mae Meyer furnished the music for the affair and deserves much credit for the success of the occasion.

The halls were neatly decorated for the event with appropriate banners and pennants. These few simple decorations were quite in place.

Refreshments were served, which apparently were enjoyed by all.

The committee on arrangements for the Masquerade was Messrs. Ellis, '11, Kennedy, '11 and Rettew, '12.

Lost

Chester E. Rettew, '12, lost a valuable signet ring somewhere around the college. The loser would kindly appreciate any information which would lead to the recovery of the ring.

Signor Bartolotta Concert

The Signor Bartolotta Concert Company was presented on Saturday evening by the Star Course committee of the Christian Associations as the fourth number of the season's Star Course. The largest crowd of the season assembled in the chapel in the Engle Conservatory and the spirited applause left no doubt as to the appreciation of the varied entertainment.

The entire program was of a high order it being generally agreed that this concert was the best one presented here for the past several years. Signor Bartolotta was at his best, and immediately won the complete favor of the large audience. His selections were heavy, but rendered with great ease and expression. The readings were also much appreciated. Miss Chaffee, the reader, is a graduate of Emerson College of Oratory. Her interpretation of "The Climax" was keenly appreciated by every one present.

A splendid feature of the program was the performances of Mr. and Mrs. Yost with violin and piano. Mr. Yost is an artist with the violin, while Mrs. Yost is also very accomplished in both violin and piano.

Many persons present expressed the thought that the Signor Bartolotta Company would be very acceptable for a return engagement on the course next year.

Students Collection

A Students Collection has been started in connection with the class in Geology. All students and friends of the institution are invited to contribute any specimens. The college should have a collection containing representative types of the minerals and rocks of their immediate locality. Any addition to the collection will be greatly appreciated.

Competition is the spice of trade, but when that competition becomes cut-throat, the spice becomes "bitters." At Lebanon Valley there has been a competition for supremacy for thirty years between the two male societies. Originally each organization was content to express its claims and advantages in the only legitimate place—the society. Gradually the spirit of seclusiveness and self-sufficiency broadened into the various student functions of the college, until today we see the bitter enmity of society spirit cropping out in every election, every appointment and almost in every word and greeting of students. Indeed, it has come to such a strait that it is hard for any society-man to feel sure that those in authority over him are not employing society-means against him. So biased has become the view-points of the various members of the Philokosmian and Kalozetean Literary Societies! Is it not a deplorable fact, and is the statement just made not really mild?

Now what has been the cause of such a feeling? The answer which we believe will cover all answers is: that there has been fostered a false conception of socalled society spirit. This thing of SPIRIT in any organization is worthless and has no meaning when it fails to take into consideration other organizations outside of itself. What should be the appreciation of Lebanon Valley SPIRIT if every student were taught to frown down in disgust upon a student of some other college if fate gave them a chance meeting? What is the appreciation if lesser organizations do the same thing? There is only one word and that scarcely strong enough—disapproval, disapproval of dis-interested on-lookers. The societies must needs depend upon on-lookers for outside friends. They cannot expect a speedy and lasting cultivation of friendship if they are unwilling to meet each other on free grounds of amiable justice toward each other. "War is hell!" and when operations assume belligerency, we cannot but expect to see the temperature rise on the battle field. If society spirit, that FALSE spirit, at L. V. has not reached this point, it is not far off. What will be the outcome of it all and what the advantage? There certainly will be no moral advantage for either party. Numbers and skill in the manipulations of those numbers will be the sole aim. When one gets in power the other will inevitably be spit upon and trampled upon. The result will be that the pendulum will forever swing back and forth murderously crushing those whom it successively strikes. In such a condition there is no chance for prosperous advancement. Each society must spend its hours in fear of the impending danger.

But history shows clearly that the lights of any land cannot be extinguished by mere warlike oppression and suppression. Neither will the good men of either society be kept down when their opponent is in power. Their active spirits will only serve to make the battle hotter. What a shame should the societies of Lebanon Valley become unfit to be charitable and just; should they so cloud their sense of judgement that they cannot see the good in their opponent; should they only distort and exaggerate the evil!

Why not be honest with ourselves, everyone, and determine that we have had as much to do with the bitter feelings and unjust acts as the next fellow? This spirit has caused a marked decrease in college spirit which should be genuine in every student. This it is that causes disunited action in our athletic circles, our Y. M. C. A., our clubs and every place where there should be united and consecrated effort in behalf of the institution we call our alma-mater.

"Malice towards none, charity towards all," should be our motto individually. If we keep our society efforts strictly within the limits that are sacred to each one of us, then the greatness in us will have a chance to develop and not be slaughtered by perpetual strife. The society and society alone is the legitimate place to show society power.

Items of Interest

The following officers were installed by the Philokosmian Literary Society on Friday evening to serve for the coming term of six weeks: President, P. R. Koontz; Vice President, S. O. Y. M. C. A.

The Sunday afternoon meeting was in charge of Lester Spessard and proved to be very interesting. The topic discussed was altogether local, it being "The Spirit of Christ in the Y. M. C. A. among the students of L. V. C." The lesson was taken from the twelfth chapter of John. Slips were given out, each containing subjects of local interest, to be discussed. Subjects such as Bible Study, moral questions, and Christian men in college sports, were discussed with much interest. A large number of fellows were present, and a good interest was manifested.

existing conditions to make the postponement. This week has always been one of the most beneficial to the student body as a whole from the standpoint of religious work. Efficient leaders have always been procured for each evening, and this year is no exception to former years. It is very important that every student attend the meetings, both the general and class meetings, every evening, for he will be the loser if he does not. The separate class meetings will be held at various places as in previous years for fifteen minutes before the general meeting. Don't forget this advance notice, but act, talk up the week of Prayer, and most of all, attend yourself.

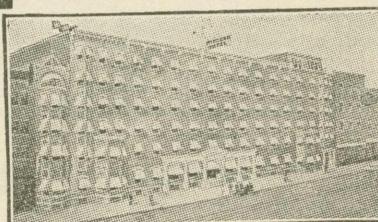

The speakers have been arranged as follows:

Monday evening, Prof. Shroyer.
 Tuesday evening, Prof. Spessard.
 Wednesday evening, Prof. Lehman.
 Thursday evening, Rev. D. E. Long.
 Friday evening, Prof. Shenk.

Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. was very highly favored in having Miss Ora Harnish, '06, to address the meeting on Sunday afternoon. Miss Harnish is now Superintendent of the Burd Orphan School at Philadelphia. She had very many interesting and helpful things to tell us. Being a former student and one deeply interested in Y. W. C. A. work she is in a position to understand the problems with which we have to deal. She gave us a heart to heart talk on "Making the most of our Opportunities," basing her remarks upon the incident recorded in the Bible concerning Zacchaeus. She said in part: "The tendency is too much to drift with the tide. It seemed an insignificant thing for Zacchaeus to climb a tree to see the Master pass, but his greatest blessing came out of it. Opportunities are not lacking in this world, while we are in college we must prepare ourselves to meet those opportunities. Be your best and do your best, every day."

Miss Harnish's talk was an inspiration to all who heard it. The attendance was splendid. We are glad so many were present to enjoy such a treat.

Ministerial Association

A very interesting meeting of the college Ministerial Association was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. A. S. Beckley, on Maple Street. The feature of the evening was an address by Rev. H. E. Miller, '99, of Lebanon. The subject of the address was, "The Bible Class Movement, but Whither?" He said in part: "The Bible Class is on the go, but whither? To this there is no answer, but whither do we want it to go? It should go forward to better things; outward to the masses; inward to the development of the spiritual life. There should be one objective of the Bible Class and Sunday School, and that is the Christianizing of every person in the community. The movement must be Christward if results are to follow. Not only should we work for numbers but for Christ." After the address an interesting discussion followed, conducted by Rev. Miller. The session was a most pleasant one, and was enjoyed by every member present.

State Convention

The Forty-third Annual State convention of the Young Men's Christian Association has just been held at West Chester from February 23 to 26 inclusive. Four members of our local association were in attendance A. O. Kauffman, '11, Samuel O. Grimm, '12, and G. A. Richie, '13, went as delegates while E. A. Spessard, '11, was sent from the state office to act as chorister for the sessions of the convention. M. G. Holzman, a former student was present as a secretary of the Lebanon Association.

The sessions of the convention were held in the First Presbyterian Church at West Chester. The various delegates were hospitably entertained by the good people of the town. The town Association served a splendid supper to the convention on Thursday evening in their hall.

The convention was one of great success and inspiration. There were present about 550 delegates from the entire state who will return to their various fields of labor with a greater faith in the effectiveness of the association work and with renewed courage and greater determination to push the work and make the association a mighty factor in the world. Those who were present will never forget the splendid address delivered by Drs. Burns and Nunhall of Germantown, Dr. Freemonte of Frankford, and Dr. Greene, of West Chester, Dr. Nunhall delivered a famous address upon "The Book of Books."

Lebanon Valley was well represented at this convention having had four delegates there. Some of our colleges had no representatives, while Gettysburg had the greatest number with seven delegates. The trip was a splendid one and was greatly enjoyed by those who had the opportunity to go.

Base Ball

It is hard to say at present just what we may expect from our coming base ball season. Some of the best players of last year have left by graduation while a few others have gone to other schools to pursue courses not offered here. There are some features that are very encouraging. Some very good new material is at hand which promises to develop into good shape. The alumni are showing signs of activity along athletic lines which will be a decided boost to the sports of our college.

When everything is considered the outlook is far from discouraging. The following schedule has been arranged:

April 1, Mercersburg Academy at Mercersburg.

April 11, Delaware College at Newark Del.

April 22, Albright at Annville.

April 25, York Tri State at York.

April 29, Millersville S. N. S. at Millersville.

May 27, Open.

June 7, Alumni at Annville.

Second Anniversary

The second anniversary of the Mathematical Round Table occurred on February twenty first. The members of the Round Table celebrated this occasion by a very pleasant social entertainment, given in Prof. Lehman's recitation room, to which the members of the Biological Field Club were invited. A good attendance of both organizations was present and the evening was spent in playing various games most of which were quite novel and original. In these games phases which are characteristic of both the Biological and Mathematical sciences, were represented in a fitting and most pleasing manner. The club had many guests among whom were Mrs. Lehman, and daughter Reba, Mr. Max Lehman and the Misses Spessard.

After the various games had furnished much amusement to all present, and the evening was drawing to a close, delicious refreshments were served. The interest of all continued unabated until time for departure arrived when all present expressed their appreciation of the Round Table's hospitality and their earnest wish for its continued success.

Alumni

Prof. A. E. Shroyer, of Lebanon Valley College, filled the pulpit of Rev. S. E. Rupp at Trinity U. B. church Lebanon Sunday morning.

Mrs. R. P. Lewars, nee Ella N. Black, '96, conservatory, '98, at present residing in Philadelphia underwent successful operation for appendicitis recently. Mrs. Lewars is still in the hospital but is recovering rapidly.

Editorial

Don't fail to be at your place in Chapel Wednesday morning.

Don't fail to be present at the class and regular prayer services which are being held this week.

Pay your athletic fees remember that it takes money to run a baseball season. The manager needs your cash.

With the return of spring weather the baseball player begins to stretch his muscle and plan for the season ahead. The baseball fever is spreading at Lebanon Valley.

For a time the outlook for the coming season was discouraging, but the color of the situation has changed recently and at present the outlook is quite promising.

The alumni have been responding to the call for assistance and quite recently a loyal member has obligated himself to collect money to uniform our team. This is no air bubble as the goods have already been ordered. What is the meaning of this? Simply this, the alunmi is becoming interested in us and if we wish to return their sympathy and cooperation we must push our end of the bargain.

There are a large number of fees that have not been paid as yet and the money is badly needed in fact necessary to produce a winning season. Now if we merit the assistance of the alumni we must first help ourselves. The situation is such that defeat or success rests in the hands of the student body. What will be the choice? If we as a student body respond the alumni will do greater things. Let us wake up and pay our fees to the man.

Although no definite statements can be made concerning the team the material in hand looks very good, and if the student body meets the proposition that is set before them squarely, success will be sure to follow. Pay all athletic fees.

There is a growing sense of unity among the alumni of Lebanon Valley College and this bids fair to increase the effectiveness of every department of the institution. The "College News" is responsible for a large part of the interest that is beginning to be manifested, increase its efficiency and you enhance the welfare of the college.

Every week renewals and kindly criticism come to help us on toward our goal. Keep your subscription in advance but don't stop there, speak about your school to every alumnus you meet. Help them to keep their interest in their ALMA MATER at high water mark MAKE HER INTEREST, YOUR INTEREST. A recent letter from a loyal son stated that he was using every effort to induce several boys in his high school to come to Lebanon Valley because he felt that any young man of worth could be safely entrusted to her care. Such loyalty counts may we have more of it.

Another alumnus who has been teaching a number of years in New Jersey says that he has found that Lebanon Valley men can always hold their own against graduates from other schools, and that in the future he will look to Lebanon Valley for candidates for any vacancies in which he may chance to be interested.

Y. M. C. A.

A fairly good crowd of fellows turned out to Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoon, and a very interesting meeting was held. The leader, Roger B. Saylor, read the Scripture from the seventeenth chapter of Luke. The subject of the meeting was "If." The leader said in part; "If we choose certain courses, they will break down our characters, while others will crystallize into strong and beautiful characters. There are two main classes of "ifs," the Destructive and Constructive. In the realization of self, the character is made prominent. It is never too late to confess our sins to God, if we only take the opportunity to do it. The "ifs" in our lives are great factors for good or evil both in and out of college."

Prof. Lehman was present and made a pleasing address.

Messrs. Brunner and Leibold also made appropriate remarks.

Y. W. C. A.

The meeting on Sunday afternoon was led by Miss Sara Zimmerman. She took as her subject, "Making the Best of It," or "The Temptation to be Melancholy." Her remarks were based on Margaret E. Sangster's little poem "Making the Best of It." The subject was one of world wide interest, because it touches upon every day life. The leader divided melancholy into two classes, first, that which is internal, arising from no fault of ours, and second that which is external, resulting from dissatisfaction with the world and with ourselves.

The remedies for melancholy were suggested by several of those present, especially the exertion of will-power, and when human power fails, the help of God. The meeting proved very interesting and helped each one to strive to "make the best of it."

Clios Entertain

The Clonian Literary Society entertained the Ex. Clios of Annville and the neighboring vicinity on Friday evening. An excellent program was rendered after which the Ex. Clios were given a chance to talk. They drew many interesting comparisons between the society as it now is and its condition of former times, which showed clearly the marked progress Cilos has made since its organization in 1871.

After the prgram the Cilos, tendered the Ex. members a reception in the Ladies' Parlors.

Washington's Birthday Party

Professors Dodge and Sleichter entertained the dormitory and town girls at a Washington's Birthday Party, February 22, in the Ladies' Parlors. The idea of a childrens party was carried out both in costume as well as in the nature of the amusements. The guests were first led into the dining hall where a complex cobweb had to be unravelled. The labor of each girl was rewarded with a promising fortune.

At a reasonable hour, elegant refreshments were served.

The guests of honor were: Mrs. Keister, Mrs. Lehman, Mrs. Shenk, Mrs. Derrickson, Mrs. Shroyer, Mrs. Sheldon, Mrs. Vallerham, Misses Brown and Lehman.

LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE

Volume II.

Annville, Pa., Tuesday, March 7, 1911

No. 22

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Scholarship for L. V. Grads

The recent Seminary Bulletin brings the information of a recent scholarship which will be interesting to Lebanon Valley people. It is known as the Charles B. Rettew scholarship. Speaking of this with others, the Bulletins says:

"The first is available to graduates of Lebanon Valley College who are members of the East Pennsylvania Conference, and is to be awarded to persons of superior scholarship and character, after a period of three years, reserved by the donor for a special and designated purpose. It is worthy of notice that East Pennsylvania Conference is the first among all the conferences of the church to have a scholarship available to its own graduate students in the Seminary, and Lebanon Valley College is the first institution of learning to be likewise represented."

Miss Brown Preceptress

Owing to the resignation of Miss Schleichter, a vacancy was also occasioned in the preceptress-ship of the ladies' dormitory.

Miss Brown, the head of the voice department has been elected to the responsible position. The rules to be enforced by Miss Brown are substantially the same as those laid down by Miss Schleichter, with the addition of the demerits system. Miss Brown assumed her duties on Monday.

Notice.

Let every alumnus or friend of the College into whose hand this paper may come become a subscriber to the "News." You owe it to yourself and the college you have befriended. Subscribe for the "News" and keep in touch with your college and its work.

Faculty Resignation

It is with much regret that we announce the resignation of Miss Schleichter as head of the German Department of the College. This came as a great surprise to the student body. The resignation due largely to local difficulties, took effect on Wednesday morning of last week. In the opinion of some perhaps, this was a hasty decision, and we regret most sincerely that the differences could not be properly adjusted, and thus avert a vacancy on the college faculty.

Oratory Recital

Don't forget the recital to be given in the chapel on Thursday evening by Miss Adams. This will be her first appearance before an Annville audience, and a full house is desired. The recital is being held in the interests of the Clonian Literary society, and they are saving no pains to make it a success. Come and help to make the occasion pleasant and successful. Admission, 25 cents, Reserved seats, ten cents extra.

Numerous clubs and leagues have sprung up mush-room-like during the past two years at Lebanon Valley. But the most recent is the Pocket Testament League. This league is a band of persons who pledge to carry a pocket Testament wherever they go and to read an entire chapter in it daily. The advent of this league, though not new at some places, marks a new religious band at Lebanon Valley. The movement needs and deserves the highest approbation and it is to be hoped that there will not be a student at Lebanon Valley that will not be carrying and reading his or her Testament.

The Mohammedan delights more in nothing than to be able to cite applicably suitable portions of the Koran. We college students and professors as well know how convenient and self satisfying too it is if we are able to quote verbatim some literary study we have made. But in this age of study and cramming time is so much crowded that we scarcely find an opportunity to so thoroughly master a piece of literature that we are able to quote much of it. In this same rush and flurry, most students forget or neglect to notice that the Bible is the foundation for most of our works of art, yet it is one of the convenient things to slide over and as a result it usually IS neglected.

Some folks dislike pledges, Don't be so timid! Don't falsely mock yourselves! There isn't a day passes that you don't offer to bet some fellow five dollars that you know more about a certain question than he does. Now is your chance to make good your many offers at game. Join the Pocket Testament League, then be a man and stick to it. It costs no stake so you have all the capital necessary.

There never was a time when real worthy men were so demanded as they are now, so professional men everywhere tell us. This generation of fathers is beginning to see this fact and consequently our colleges and Universities are being filled and at the same time being so arranged as to suit the needs of all classes. Education has become so popular that the youth are beginning to feel paupers, unless they have an A. B. or its equivalent strung on to their names.

But is this degree-getting actually making men? Is the percentage of college graduates commensurate with the total number of students who have made the attempt at education? Then again is the quality of the graduated men and women what it should be?

These three questions are asked wherever we go. As college students, are they worth our consideration and answer? They certainly are. No alumnus of any school however poor the standard may have been, is ashamed that he has at least received that much education. If that is true, why not hand at least that much to some other fellow. If you do that much, if you awaken in some young mind the desire to know more that mind WILL know more and who can tell the value of his knowing?

But when he has once learned to desire for something better new difficulties arise. We see him then probably a preparatory student or a Freshman. Someone must now awaken other desires within him. Here is the opportunity of the upper classmen. Whether we will or not, every step we take is measured sometime by an underclassman. Our influence can be made for weal or woe in those younger lives. With all our attempts at

"bleaching," it seems too often to be true that we sorely neglect to help give the underclassman worthy subjects to think and ponder upon. He gets in trouble often and with no experience, no friends to help him out. He takes his own course. He goes from bad to worse. His lessons are neglected, and we see the natural consequent, he is thrown out and goes home stigmatized as a young college reprobate unfit for decent company. We have a duty to perform in keeping all such fellows at their work and giving them a helping hand whenever they need it. Even though they may themselves never make great use of their education, the inheritance of their children's children will at least have a possible intellectual advantage that they themselves did not have.

Lastly comes the quality question of men and women who have actually been graduated. I have known persons to consume ten valuable years of "post-graduate work" trying to find out how they might possibly inculcate their own lives into the living mass of humanity they termed "our home folks." That problem could have been settled right at college if those afflicted persons would have had two grains of common sense. Too many college students expect to wait until after commencement day to begin to live. A sadder mistake was never made. Student, you are living now just as truly as ever you will live, unless it is that you will perhaps have to stoop a little lower and a little more often after you graduate, "if you would miss many a hard bump." Train yourself to "fit in" anywhere at all and then you'll be worth something.

The time is approaching when some of us will "go out." With that going out, others will come in and many stay. Let us remember to help show some one the values of an education, then to see to it that he don't "flunk out," and finally to "fit him out" to "fit in" some place when he is needed.

Sunday, March 12, will be Lebanon Valley College Day in the U. B. churches of Harrisburg and vicinity. The Harrisburg U. B. Ministerium has arranged for the occasion by an interchange of ministers to the various churches in Harrisburg and vicinity.

Mr. Joe Kreider spent a few days in Philadelphia and heard the new opera Natoma.

One of the most spirited and interesting joint sessions of the christian associations for the year was held on Sunday afternoon. A special feature of this meeting was the first appearance of a mixed quartette on the program. Miss Gingrich also rendered a beautiful solo which was well received.

The leader for the meeting was Miss Zimmerman and the subject discussed was Service and Devotion. Mr. Ritchey and Mr. Kauffman gave some interesting remarks on the various phases of Service and Devotion.

Mr. Ritchey's remarks were based on the fact that as God is the creator of all things and as man is his greatest creation so it is the duty of man to return service to his creator for his many blessings.

Mr. Kauffman in a short address showed clearly the different kinds of service that man may render to his creator. The Devotion that is demanded in order that Christ may be glorified. He pointed out at the same time the need today for a greater consecration in religious as well as ever other kind of work.

Miss Zimmerman spoke upon the relation of service and Devotion. She showed in her usual clear and concise way the meaning of Devotion and Service. The necessity for reciprocal relation between the Creator and his creation. With well chosen quotations from Whittier and other poets the speaker make her points clear to the audience. Her remarks upon the singularity of meaning of the two words, Devotion and Service, were unique. Every factor in the equation of success was present in the rendition of the following program.

Leader, Miss Sara Zimmerman; Subject:—Relative Value of Devotion and Service; Value of Devotion in Christian Life, Mr. A. O. Kauffman; Solo, Miss Ora Bachman; Value of Service, Mr. G. A. Richie; Quartett, Messrs. Rhodes and Botts and Misses Spessard and Lehman; Devotion and Service Exemplified in some Biblical Character, Miss Esther Schell.

A recent addition to the Mathematics room was the installation of electric light chandeliers. The credit for this goes to the Mathematical Round Table, since it was through the efforts of that organization that they were procured.

Prof. and Mrs. Sheldon made a weekend trip to Philadelphia.

Volume II.

Annville, Pa., Tuesday, March 14, 1911

No. 23

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. Joint Session

The joint associations were privileged on Sunday afternoon to hear Dr. F. C. Thompson of Buffalo, New York. Dr. Thompson's subject was the "Elements of Success." By the use of numerous illustrations the speaker kept the attention of his hearers focused upon his theme. His remarks were in part as follows: Everybody wants to "get there" in this age. The new life demands progress. Among the great necessities of success is that of concentration. Paul was a man that believed in the power of concentration. We should not scatter our energies, but aim for big things. In this age of specialization, he who does one thing well has more chances of success than one that scatters his energies.

This same principle should be applied along religious lines. We must specialize in order to gain a greater appreciation of the gospel.

In Paul's life his power lay not only in his concentrative ability but also in always looking forward. He forgot the things that were behind and pressed on to the things that were before. In other words we must have ambition; the holy, lofty and worthy kind of ambition that leads men to consider their fellowmen as brothers, not the ambition that led Napoleon to triumph over the bodies of his dead soldiers.

In having ambition we must strive, for "Woe unto them that are easy in Zion." We cannot expect to gain success by the use of elevators.

By the use of many illustrations Dr. Thompson showed up clearly the points he wished to make, with such vividness and force so as to make them doubly effective. Although there was a good attendance, yet, if many had known of the treat they would miss, there would surely have been a greater number present. We are always glad to have visitors address our associations. Our prayers and best wishes are extended to Dr. Thompson and may success crown his efforts.

College Day at Harrisburg

The United Brethren churches of Harrisburg and vicinity observed "College Day" on March 12. By these services the college and its opportunities were set forth anew to the people and from all accounts, a good interest was manifested. We regret that we cannot announce the names of all who exchanged pulpits for this occasion, but we give various changes as far as possible: Harrisburg: Otterbein, Rev. U. S. G. Renn; First, President Lawrence Keister; Derry Street, Prof. H. H. Shenk and Prof. A. E. Shroyer; State Street, Rev. R. R. Rodes; Steelton, Dr. J. A. Lyter; Millersburg, Rev. I. E. Runk; Hershey, Rev. J. P. Koontz; West Fairview, Rev. A. S. Lehman; Wormleysburg, Rev. C. A. Mutch.

German Chair Filled

The recent resignation of the professor of German necessitated the immediate procuring of a new head of that department. We are glad to announce that the position has been filled in this short time. Miss Lucy Seltzer, '10, has taken charge of the first three years' German, while Prof. Stine, of Annville, is teaching the advanced German. Miss Seltzer, a member of last year's class is a good German student, ably fitted for her work, while Prof. Stine, a former member of the college faculty, is a very proficient German scholar. The "NEWS" wishes both success in their work.

Monday, March 20, 7:45 p. m.—Star Course.

Alumni

Miss Lucy Seltzer, '10, of Lebanon, spent Saturday in Philadelphia and attended the performance of "Natoma."

Misses Edith Freed, '10, and Edith Frantz were the guests of Miss LaVerne Keister, Brooklyn, from Wednesday to Sunday. Miss Keister and Miss Margaret Rigler are students at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn. As all four were former students they enjoyed a "Lebanon Valley Reunion," and at the same time enjoyed Maude Adams in "Chantecleer."

Mrs. C. E. Geyer, '80, nee Herr, of Catawissa, spent several days visiting friends and acquaintances in Annville recently.

Star Course

The next and last number of the Star Course entertainments will be the entertainment lecture given by Sylvester A. Long, in the Engle Hall, March 20. It will consist of entertainment, recreation, instruction and inspiration and not merely funny stories. Mr. Long has met with remarkable success on the platform in almost every state of the Union. It is hoped that a large audience will greet Mr. Long next Monday evening. Admission, 35 cents. Reserved seats, 10 cents extra.

Editorial

There is a certain feature of L. V. life which we wish to emphasize in this issue, and that is the attendance at public college functions. For some time we have been noticing that the attendance at public recitals and entertainments, barring the Star Course, has not been up to the standard and up to the deserts of the various performers. Every person who appears on the chapel stage in any entertainment of whatever nature it may be, has gone thru some preparation for the event. All public speakers tell us that it is easier to speak to a crowded house than to an audience, seventy five per cent of which is composed of empty seats.

A good example of this lack of interest, for such we believe it is, was manifested in the recital last Thursday night. The recital itself was all that could be desired, but judging from the size of the audience, one could hardly believe the above statement to be true. This recital was one that merited an audience the size of a regular Star Course number. But this is not the only example we might cite.

Other entertainments just as meritorious have been held with audiences no larger than in the above mentioned instance.

No matter what the organization under whose auspices the entertainment is being held, if it merits the permission of the use of the chapel from the authorities for the rendition, it merits patronage from the entire student body and friends of the college in the immediate vicinity at least. If you desire to see the organization to which you belong patronized, it is your duty, each and every one, to patronize others when they are making an effort for their betterment. This is not more than fair; it is not more than right.

We are unable to state a definite reason for this condition, and we regret to say that it is true. Surely there is a lack of college spirit in this respect and it looks almost as tho it borders on egoism. There will be another public recital in the conservatory this week. Why not come out and greet the performers with a crowded house? Why not show them we are interested in them and their work as we would have them be in ours? "A word to the wise is sufficient."

As spring draws near, the base ball fever begins to rise. The aspirants for the various teams begin to get in form for the coming season. The manager and captain will issue an official call for candidates very soon. Now, fellows, every one who can possibly do so, come out to the athletic field and work as hard as you can. Every fellow has the same chance, for the manager says absolutely, the best man will get the position. If you do not secure a place on the varsity nine, do not stop coming to practice as soon as the team is chosen. They need hard consistent practice every day, and a strong scrub team is needed to give them that practice. Do your best for a successful season.

There is another way many can help, and that is by paying all outstanding athletic fees. As any other organization needs funds the athletic association has plenty of places to use money to advantage. Of course this does not apply to all, for a fairly good number have paid in full. It is to those who have not paid that this appeal is made. The treasurer of the athletic association is ready to receive all funds, and issue seasons tickets to all who pay their fees. Will you not surprise him by demanding your tickets on account of the paid fee?

Splendid Oratory Recital

Any persons who failed to be present at the Oratory Recital on Thursday evening missed a rare treat. The Clonian Literary society presented Miss May Belle Adams, director of the Oratory Department, in a public recital. Each number of the program was very well received by the audience. Miss Adams' rendition of Scotch dialect, and "The Sleep Walking Scene" from "Macbeth" were especially appreciated. A special feature of the recital was an original play dramatized from a book by Mrs. Laura E. Richards. The portrayal of every character was very fine and showed Miss Adams' great ability in that line of work. Miss Adams was assisted by several vocal and instrumental selections. The program follows.

PART I Piano Duet—Poet and Peasant, Overture, Suppe, Mae Meyer, Ruth Detweiler; Through the Flood, Dan MacLaren; Selected Poems; Sleep-walking Scene from Macbeth, Shakespeare; Vocal Duet, Selected, Edith Gingrich, Earl Spessard.

PART II Vocal Solo, Selected, Earl Spessard; Original Play—Mrs. Tree. Dramatized by Miss Adams from book by Mrs. Laura E. Richards, Characters, Mrs. Tree, Direxia Hawks, maid-servant to Mrs. Tree, Miss Vesta Blythe, niece to Mrs. Tree, Mrs. Maria Darracott Pryor, niece to Mrs. Tree, Mrs. Malvina Weight, neighbor to Mrs. Tree, Tommy Candy.

Conservatory Notes

Prof and Mrs. Sheldon, left on Thursday evening for Williamsport, where they gave an organ recital in the St. Lukes Evangelical church on Friday evening.

Miss Maud Kirshner spent last Sunday at her home in Shoemakersville.

The Junior class of the conservatory extends to all a most cordial invitation to their recital to be given Thursday evening March sixteenth.

The class has been long looking forward to this occasion and to make this a success it is the desire of the class that the students and friends of the college will encourage them by their presence on Thursday evening.

Juniors Feed

Wednesday night was an occasion of much feasting and a jolly good time among the members of the class of 1912. It was the first social affair of the class in its junior year. While it was rather late in the year, that did not detract any from the pleasures of the occasion. The event was extraordinary as shown by the unity of the class and the appreciation of the bounteous table and other means of entertainment provided by the committee in charge. The class has had trouble ever since its Freshman year in reaching any unity of action in social features. This their latest attempt was a most decided success and the participants came not away hungry.

The banquet was held in the library reading room while the reception room alone was appropriately decorated for the other informal social features. Music was constantly to be heard and College and class songs were sung. College and class enthusiasm as well as general good cheer went round.

At 8 p. m. nineteen of the Juniors assembled and an hour was spent in sociability. Then all were conducted below where a table filled with good things awaited them. When all the courses were served speeches were in order at the call of the master of ceremonies Oliver Butterwick. The table was left behind at 10:45 and at 11:15 all departed much pleased with the effects of the good time together.

The committee of arrangements consisted of Oliver Butterwick, Clair Harnish and Miss Carrie Light.

Those present were Misses Hershey, Kilmer, Lau, Light, Seltzer, Weidler, Messrs. Beckley, Butterwick, Grimm, Harnish, Keister, Leibold, Plummer, Reed, Ressler, Rettew, Shively, Smith, Thomas and Wingerd.

Biological Field Club

The recent meeting of the Biological Field club was extremely interesting. Samuel Zeigler presented a very well prepared paper on "The Economic Value of the Bob White." J. E. Marshall read an extensive paper on "Medicinal Plants found in this Vicinity." In the paper these plants were located and some distinguishing marks given. Clair Harnish carefully discussed the "Native Rusts and Smuts." He presented some amazing figures which represent the loss each year from these pests. "Histological structure of a grasshopper" was discussed in detail by E. A. Spessard. In this connection many parts were shown from prepared slides by the means of the lantern.

During the general discussion Prof. Derickson demonstrated by the use of some moss slides the great interest the lantern may add to the work of the club. The attendance was good and much interest shown throughout. At the next meeting the club will celebrate its Anniversary by presenting Dr. Johnson of Johns Hopkins University in a lecture. Further announcement will be given later.

St. Patrick's Party

The annual St. Patrick's Party will be held on Friday evening, March 17, in the Ladies' Parlors. The Clonian Literary society extends a hearty invitation to all students and friends of the college to attend. This is an annual event, held on a par with the Hallowe'en Party given by the Philokosmians, and the Masquerade given on St. Valentine's Day by the Kalozeans. Everybody looks forward to these events with no small anticipation. The Crios hope a large number will be present to enjoy the "seventeenth of Ireland" with them.

Pres. Keister, Prof. A. E. Schroyer, John Lyter, Ivan Ressler, Harry Charlton, Harry Ulrich, Miss Parks, Nellie Seltzer, Carrie Light and Catharine Hershey heard the address on Women's suffrage given by Judge Ben Lindsey in the House of Representatives, Harrisburg, on Monday afternoon.

H. S. Warner, of Chicago, national official of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association was here Monday looking after the interest of the local league previous to the state contest which is to be held here the latter part of April. At present the local league is busy preparing for the contest in which a number of the representative colleges of the state will have a speaker. This promises to be one of the most interesting intercollegiate affairs held at the school this year.

Fruition

BY KATHARINE TYNAN
The year's at flowering time,
Beauty's full—at her prime,
The night is ours and Love's.

All passes!
There's a voice in the myrtle groves.

Love, love me forever!
The leaves tremble and shiver.
Spring's heavy with sweet.

All passes!
There's a stirring of hidden feet.
Love, did you speak or say
Aught? The wind is at play.
The nightingale is still.

All passes!
The dews: are the dews so chill?
Why is your cheek so white,
White Love, on our wedding night?
See—joy long waited for!

All passes!
The wind sighed: nothing more.

LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE

Volume II.

Annville, Pa., Tuesday, March 21, 1911

No. 24

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Athletic Mass Meeting

A mass meeting of all the students and friends of the college has been arranged by the members of the executive committee of the Athletic Association. This meeting will be held in the college chapel on Thursday evening March the twentyfourth. The purpose of the meeting is to arouse a keener interest in all phases of college athletics and primarily to discuss certain phases of the approaching baseball season. Prominent men from the town who are interested in the sport have been invited to attend. It is hoped that mutual cooperation between the town and the college may be established. The Executive Committee of the Alumni Association will be present and lend their support to our counsels. Let every body be present and help to arouse a clean healthy athletic spirit at Lebanon Valley, a spirit that will mean VICTORY.

Junior Music Recital

A good sized audience greeted the Junior Music class at their recital in the Conservatory last Thursday evening. Each member of the class showed very pleasingly the results of their efforts in the conservatory this year. Rounds of applause greeted each performer and the two-piano numbers were especially popular. The chapel was tastefully decorated with potted plants and the class colors, lavender and white. Several vocal numbers and readings added much to the program.

The members of the class are: Miss Meda May Diehm, Penryn; Miss Ruth Elizabeth Engle, Palmyra; Miss Anna Alma Fry, Sec'y Palmyra; Miss Katherine May Gingrich, Pres., Palmyra; Miss Mary Alice Spayd, Annville; Miss Bertha Susan Spessard, V. pres., Annville; Miss Sara Catherine Strickler, Treas., Lebanon.

Athletic Social

Several weeks ago the Executive Committee of the Athletic Association decided to raise money for Athletic Scholarships for 1911-12 and for this purpose a committee consisting of Saylor, Lehman, Ressler, Hensel and Lyter were appointed. The committee has arranged to give an Athletic social next Saturday evening in the Assembly room of the Library. Boats are to arrive any time after 7:30 p. m. and the passengers will then be inspected by the Custom House Officers who will determine the duty each one must pay according to the United States Custom Laws. An interesting program has been arranged and also several other attractions which will not be made known until Saturday evening.

In connection with the social a Popularity Contest is being conducted and voting can be done any time until 9 p. m. Saturday. A valuable prize will be given to the winner. The votes are cheap. Be a repeater. Vote often and see your favorite win. Woman Suffrage is desired in this contest. Refreshments will be served free of charge. It's something new and for a good cause. Come and have a good time.

Ministerial Association

The Ministerial Association of the College was pleasantly entertained at their last regular meeting, at the home of J. W. Bomberger on Sheridan Avenue on Thursday evening. D. E. Young was elected secretary to fill the unexpired term of W. L. Murray, who resigned and left school. The paper was read by C. E. Rettew, and an interesting discussion followed.

Miss Mary Gruber, of Campbelltown and a student at Millersville State Normal School was in attendance at the Clio. St. Patricks party

The mass meeting on Thursday will be a success if the students make it so. Let every one be present. Show your spirit.

The athletic circles of all our colleges are now in the height of baseball expectations. Football and basketball each have their turn. The manner in which these sports are conducted requires much money, time and even the risk of a few bruises. Some people who know nothing of the condition of college life and even some students, teachers and other authorities of our colleges denounce them in vigorous terms. Opposition takes various forms. Some denounce them because they think athletics, and especially football, brutal, others object to the expense and still others say that under the present system only a few favored men who make the team reap any benefits from athletics while all are forced to spend their means for their support.

All of these arguments are about as valid as the argument of the back woods farmer who claims that college boys should be compelled to chop wood for pastime and exercise. He has never investigated conditions, nor have most of the critics who are found in the institutions themselves.

Athletics may become an evil in many ways, but if they are carefully supervised by the school authorities, and directed by a competent coach there is no institution in our modern educational system that will or can do more for the all around development of American youth than athletic sports.

If these sports fail at any school to get the proper results it is not the fault of the sports in question but in the management of the institution itself. No college can control these activities without giving some time and money toward their support. Teams run on an entirely independent basis are sure to fail in their efficiency as an agent for development in student life. If a college would reap the vast benefits that may come from properly conducted sports, it is under a moral necessity to assume some of the responsibility connected therewith.

Some well meaning men denounce athletics because they claim they lead to rowdyism, evil associations and a general lowering of ideals. This is not the fault of the sport, but the fault of those who should direct them.

Mercer a man whose past and present life has brought him in touch with all the phases of college activities and who himself has passed thru about all the experiences possible for a college man, from a state of absolute worthlessness to one of great value in the formation of life and character, a man, who in the interest of our tempted college boys has visited nearly every school of importance in the United States, and who has been familiar with the life in many of them for a long period of years, at a recent dinner in San Francisco said that during the past decade or so since athletics have assumed such prominence in college life drunkenness and all kindred crimes have decreased more than fifty per cent. These conditions, he claims bear a close causal relation and he supports the claim with valid arguments.

This fact alone should make every man who is interested in college sports more devoted to them and those who hold aloof should make a closer study of conditions as they actually exist and maybe they would be led to find in athletics an ideal method to govern the spontaneous energies and activities of American youth. Let us at Lebanon Valley make our athletics count for mental, moral, and physical development.

Y. W. C. A.

The subject for discussion on Sunday afternoon was "Power from Above." Miss Esther Schell led the meeting and carefully reviewed the circumstances under which the master gave the command to his disciples to tarry before beginning their mission, until they should be endued with power. She emphasized the necessity of heeding this command and pointed out the important part it played in rendering the disciples' work effective.

A lively discussion followed the leaders remarks in which many excellent thoughts were brought out. It is necessary that we put ourselves into an attitude to receive God's spirit before we can get power from above. We too often attempt to do things in our own strength, the uselessness of which is clearly illustrated by numerous examples from the Bible. Whenever we cease to listen to the voice of the Spirit our acts are not in accordance with God's Will.

To do effective Christian work we must keep in close touch with Christ and gain through prayer, the power necessary to fulfil his commands.

Professor and Mrs. Derickson Entertain

Saturday evening, March 18, at 8 p. m. Prof. and Mrs. Derickson most pleasantly entertained at their home the members of the class in Biology 1b.

A most delightful entertainment was prepared for us by the host and hostess and the evening was a great treat. There were games founded upon Biology and appropriate rewards were given to the victors in the various contests. We must not forget the excellent refreshments served at just the right time. The occasion did not lack its musical features for Prof. Derickson provided us with biological songs which we must needs sing.

Those present were Misses Yarker, Horn, Clippinger, Christeson, Lehman, Lottie Spessard, Burd and Messrs. Lehman, Grimm, Beckley, Saylor, Heffelfinger.

Y. M. C. A.

Guy Wingerd led the meeting on Sunday afternoon. The subject of his discussion was the value of self respect. He defined and set forth in a pleasing manner his meaning of self respect. G. A. Richie gave a very interesting report on the industrial work of the Y. M. C. A. as observed at the recent convention at West Chester, Pa. The method the Y. M. C. A. worker uses to win these men for Christ follows in brief. The industrial workers may be interested in music or in educational lines. The Y. M. C. A. provides lectures on almost every topic. The evils of drink are portrayed, the dangers of tuberculosis and contagious diseases discussed.

Educational advantages are offered to members, by which foreigners may learn English, civics or any line of work. The part that leading men of big corporations are taking in Y. M. C. A. work was indicated. There is a need for brains to help this movement along. This work is a challenge to all college men to serve and in this way reach the workers in our industrial fields for Christ.

S. O. Grimm gave a general survey of the convention and especially school and college phases of the Y. M. C. A. work. His report was in brief as follows: The importance of college men was advanced. Statistics prove that sixty-five per cent of all the important men to-day are college men. A college man has one chance out of one hundred and twenty six to become famous, while the man in everyday life has only one chance in eight thousand four hundred and twenty four.

College graduates furnish one third of all the prominent men. Therefore much is expected from the college man. If he fails, then his failure does more harm than the failure of an ordinary man. In schools and colleges, the Y. M. C. A. should stand for these essentials. First, true animals; second, sanctified brains; third, true friendship and faith.

In the Christian life there is no such thing as graduation. Christianity means not only to keep one's self unspotted from the world; but to visit the widows and the fatherless in their affliction. Important local features of the convention were that our Association had the second highest number of delegates and that Mr. Earle Spessard led the singing.

St. Patrick's Party

The Clonian Literary Society tendered a brilliant party to the other Societies and friends on the evening of St. Patrick's Day. It is needless to say that it was a grand success.

The reception hall and parlors of the ladies' dormitory were beautifully decorated in green and upon the walls were appropriate quotations of Irish hue.

Among the amusements was a chart for subscribing guesses as to how many snakes were chased out of Ireland. Irish clover leaves with letters upon them were passed around. The letters formed the words Bedelia and Patrick. Groups of these letters were formed each of which wrote an eight line poem each line beginning with the letter of the group. The winning groups of each word each told an Irish joke, and the winners of this contest received a clever reward.

The gentlemen received their partners for refreshments by guessing the names of the ladies from their shadows thrown [upon a white curtain. Some sure guesses were made.

After this refreshments were served. The first course consisted of salad served upon lettuce leaves, with wafers and pickles. This was followed by a deliciously flavored green colored ice cream.

A social hour was spent and the party broke up amid hearty cheers and laughter.

Items of Interest

Chester E. Rettew preached at Pleasant Hill on Sunday evening.

Francis R. Kennedy, '11, led Christian Endeavor society at the U. B. Church. The topic was "Money and its uses" and the leader made a few quite appropriate remarks.

Miss Pauline Burd, of Shiremans-town was a guest of Miss Lottie Spessard over Sunday.

Elmer E. Yake, ex '11, and now a member of the Junior class at Lehigh University has recently been elected to the honorary society of Tau Beta Pi at his institution. This society has scholarship and general college activities for its fundamental principles, and any one that receives this decided distinction must of necessity be both a scholar and a gentleman.

Prof. A. E. Shroyer filled the pulpit for Rev. O. T. Ehrhart, '11, at Hebron, on Sunday evening.

Prof. Parks addressed Rev. Witman's congregation on Sunday morning. Her subject "A girl I have known" was interestingly presented. Many facts concerning the recent shirtwaist strike in New York City were incidentally discussed.

LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE

Volume II.

Annvile, Pa., Tuesday, March 28, 1911

No. 25

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Athletic Mass Meeting

The mass meeting in the chapel on Thursday evening was well represented by a large number of the members of student body, faculty, and alumni who reside in this vicinity. C. F. Harnish, '12, president of the athletic association presided. The purpose of the meeting was to "boost" athletics in general, but base ball for the coming season in particular. Quite a bit of spirit was shown on the part of the students from their responses in songs and yells. The addresses by the alumni were interesting and spirited, and put new life into every one present. A feature of the meeting was the announcement by Mr. Alfred K. Mills, '04, that alumni and friends had contributed sufficient funds to equip the base ball team with new uniforms. Addresses were made by Messrs. A. K. Mills, '04, Fred Light '00, J. Walter Eshenshade, '03, Dr. M. W. Brunner, '01, Profs. Derickson, '02, Shroyer, '00, Shenk, Wanner and Miss Dodge. It is hoped that more such interesting meetings will be held to help to build up College athletics and give them the place they ought to have in the student's life.

First Base Ball Game

The local base ball season will open next Saturday when the L. V. team will journey to Mercersburg to play the Mercersburg Academy nine. Our opponents will have a splendid team in the field, and a good game can be expected.

It is urged upon every fellow who can to come out to practice every night this week, so that the strongest possible aggregation may be secured to battle against the Academy team. Our team has not been selected yet, and manager Brunner and captain Harnish desire good practices every evening this week. Let the baseball slogan for the week be "On to Mercersburg."

Star Course

The fifth and last number of the course entertainments presented by our Christian Associations was given in the college chapel on Monday night March 20, to a fair sized audience which however was not nearly commensurate with the splendid entertainment. The attraction was Sylvester A. Long, the humorist lecturer, who gave us his delightful lecture "Lightning and Toothpicks." A glance at his subject at once praises the question as to the relation between lightning and toothpicks. The lecturer treated the subject in a most unique manner and illuminated his discourse with many humorous and appropriate illustrations. Throughout there was enough of the humorous to hold the attention of every one in the audience. It was an entertainment splendidly conceived and delivered in marvelous English. This the last of the course and was up to the standard of the previous entertainments.

The purport of the lecture was to show that every thing in life comes about in obedience to some inexorable, and unchanging law, and to show the place of love in the universe. Everyone present was very much pleased with the entertainment.

Alumni

Dr. and Mrs. Gerberich, of Lebanon Pa., will start in a few weeks for a tour abroad. Mrs. Gerberich was a member of the class of '07. The tour is planned through the British Isles France and Germany and to extend over a period of several months, at the end of which time Dr. Gerberich will take up studies in a German University.

Miss Myrtle Garrett, '10, visited friends at the college on Friday.

The time is rapidly approaching when the business management of the "News" will change. The present manager has succeeded in defraying all expences as they fell due but in order to continue this policy and insure the permanence of the publication, it is necessary that all arrears be advanced and all renewals promptly remitted. Look at the label on your paper. The date found there denotes the time of expiration. If this notice is promptly complied with it will greatly help the management.

All students who have not settled with the "News" will please see the manager during the next week. Remember there is no time like the present.

Y. M. C. A.

The regular session of the Y. M. C. A. held on Sunday afternoon, was conducted by Mr. Russel Weidler. Although few were present yet the usual interest was manifested. The leader used as a basis of his remarks the second verse of the seventh chapter of Matthew. "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." He clearly brought out that "we gain as we give," and very beautifully showed that this was true, by some appropriate illustrations. He showed that this was true in animal life, plant life and in every phase of our own lives. Ritchie, Leibold and Rettew also gave short talks on the subject.

Editorial

At one crisis of this nation's history Poor Richard headed a paper with the picture of a segmented snake, with the quite terse and pointed injunction "Unite or Die." We wish we had that same cut to place at the head of the column of this issue of the NEWS.

Lebanon Valley has passed through a long and painful winter of Difficulties. Students, constituents, authorities and all have at times become discouraged. But spring has come! The ice is broken, and the "Ship of State" rides uneasily at her anchor chains impatient to be on a new career. Shall we hold her longer?

We students and some alumni met on Thursday evening and had a good old spirited meeting. Then it was pointed out WHO are the anchor chains.

There is no getting out of it, if this college is to prosper, as it is hoped she will, the student bodies as they successively inherit that honor, will to a large extent check or forward that prosperity. Now are we going to allow all that we heard at that mass meeting to soak out just as fast as it soaked in. Honestly, now, what did you attend that meeting for anyway? Out of respect? Then you disgraced yourself and belied your honor! Out of a sense of duty? This college has enough "standpatters," you had better go bury yourself! Out of a LOVE FOR THE CAUSE? Congratulations! If you came not for that purpose, then "you are a liar and the truth is not in you." It is just as bad to act a lie as to tell one.

But we are not pessimistic we believe there were many there who had the cause of this college at heart, many who are determined that this cause shall go forward in spite of all difficulties. When that cause is finally reached will it not be pathetic to see some of those cheap, chicken hearted, vacillating character-pigmies strutting about the grand old structure nimbly to each other: "I thought so; I thought so."

Don't become a scape-goat student, use what little brains you have to the advantage of all noble efforts which are being advocated in behalf of this institution. If a few persons should down athletics don't YOU begin to "pout" and wince that you won't play "dolley" any longer if they don't all play YOUR way.

The alumni are making efforts to coalesce with us in projects of advancement along all lines Let us not be in the lurk when the final moment comes for a union. We first must unite with each other if we ever hope to unite with any other. "If any man have ought" against his society neighbor let him fix it up. Don't knock, but boost!

Now you are many of you crying that this is all right in theory, but not in practice. We tell you, it IS all right in practice! That argument is two million years out of date. It has been exploded as often as a serious minded reformer has appeared. If you think LESS about its impracticability and MORE about trying it, you won't have so many difficulties.

Don't wait any longer now, but DO something, no matter what or how little it may be. For this thing is GOING and when its all over you will be sorry if you never contributed anything to UNITY BETWEEN ALUMNI AND STUDENTS IN BEHALF OF THE COLLEGE.

W. O. Ellis, '11, and F. R. Kennedy, '11, enjoyed a day's outing at Mt. Gretna on Sunday.

Clio-Philo Joint Session

A very interesting joint session of the Clonian and Philokosmian Literary Societies was held on Friday evening in Philo hall. The program was interesting from start to finish, both literary and musical numbers showing marked preparation on the part of the performers. About one hundred persons were present. Among those present who are not members of either society were Rev. H. B. Spayd, Prof. and Mrs. J. E. Lehman, Miss Dodge, Miss Adams, Miss Parks, Miss Brown, Miss Spessard, Miss Seltzer, Miss Garret, Mr. Barnhart and Mr. Kreider.

The officers of the Clonian society presided over the meeting and the following program was rendered:

Duett, Katie Gingrich Ruth Engle; Reading, Verda Snyder; Paper, Edith Lehman; Vocal Solo, Merle Turby; Oration, Oliver Butterwick; Parody, J. K. Lehman; Quartett, Edith Gingrich, Ora Bachman, Paul Koontz, Paul Hummel; Olive Branch and Living Thoughts, Editors.

Athletic Social

The campaign for money to be used for athletic purposes culminated in an athletic social held Saturday evening in the auditorium of the Carnegie Library. The social was a success in all respects, the committee used no little energy in devising plans to draw and attract the student body.

The money that was taken in Saturday evening is to be used to pay the tuition of a man for next year who will be proficient in football, basketball and base ball.

Miss Mae Meyer was awarded a large Lebanon Valley shield for having polled the largest number of votes in the "Popular Girl Contest," which had been in progress for a week or more.

Excellent refreshments were served, consisting of ice cream and cake, after which the following program was rendered: Piano Solo, Mae Meyer; Quartette, Misses Gingrich, Christeson, Lottie Spessard and Bachman; Sketch, Messrs. Ischy and Weigle; Vocal Solo, Edith Gingrich; Awarding of prize to Mae Meyer.

WON HIS CASE

Maurice Metzger, L. V., '07, Appears Before Court for First Time

Maurice Metzger, a young Middletown attorney who was recently admitted to practice law before the Dauphin county court had his first case Monday before Judge Kunkel, and what is important to all young lawyers, won a decision.

Metzger's clients were William Richardson and Harry Given, who were charged with stealing a keg of porter from H. O. Holstein, a hotel man of Hummelstown. They had no attorney and Mr. Metzger was instructed by the court to look after their interests.

The defendants stated they are in the huckster business and were working in Hummelstown on the day the theft occurred. The keg was found along the trolley tracks and they intended to take it to the Capitol City Brewing Co., at Harrisburg. Mr. Metzger showed that the evidence was too flimsy to substantiate the charge and in half an hour the men were acquitted by the jury.

Inter-Class Game

On Wednesday evening practically the entire student body went to Lebanon to witness the annual Basketball game between the Sophs and Freshies. The Freshmen had the advantage in experience, both individually and as a team. Early in the contest it was seen that the Freshmen had the advantage but the Sophs fought pluckily to the end of the game which ended with the score of 25 to 10 in favor of the Freshmen.

Much unnecessary roughness was injected into the game, due largely to the intense rivalry between the two classes.

As a preliminary game the Fat Men and Lean Men decided the much-disputed championship in that line by the score of 14 to 6 in favor of the former. Line up.

A very interesting and helpful meeting was held on Sunday afternoon. It was conducted by Miss Lottie Spessard who chose as her subject "Untrodden Paths." She said in part: Each day we enter upon an untrodden path that we know nothing about. Yet, we need fear nothing since God is our leader, and is sure to guide us aright. Although the way is new to us God has trodden the way before us, and if we allow ourselves to be led by Him it is impossible to wander from the path of Truth.

Opening Game

L. V. MAKES GOOD SHOWING AGAINST MERCERSBURG

With plenty of ginger and grit the Lebanon Valley boys opened their baseball season with the strong Mercersburg Academy team at Mercersburg on Saturday. Altho defeated, the boys are in no way discouraged at the outcome, nor at the prospects for the season. This being the first game of the season, and considering the cold weather of last week, the L. V. team showed splendid form. Little pitched a splendid game, having seven strikeouts to his credit. Captain Harnish set a swift pace for his team by procuring three safe hits out of four times at bat.

Not until the last inning did the local boys score, the hits being well scattered. In the fourth inning with two out, Harnish procured his second hit of the game. Smith followed with a hit, but Charles failed to connect when a hit would have meant a run. Our only score came in the ninth when Lyter reached first on an error and stole second. Harnish again came to bat, singled and Lyter scored.

Mercersburg's runs were due largely to their ability to hit when hits meant runs. In the second, Legore hit for three bases, and came in on Etting's hit. Oberle scored in the third. In the fifth, three runs were scored, two coming in on Hanks' triple. The line up follows:

Special Committee

For some time the problem of the best form of government at Lebanon Valley has been puzzling a large number of minds. Atlast we hope a conclusion is in sight. The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees took up the matter at its meeting last week, and finally decided that a committee of three from each, faculty, student body and executive committee be selected to settle the difficulty. The committee of the student body composed of Messrs. Ehrhart, Ellis and Butterwick have already met with the faculty committee, consisting of Profs. Shenk, Shroyer and Spessard, and decided on a form of student government. A meeting of the three committees will be held in the near future, at which time it is hoped the plans submitted will be ratified, and student government established on a firmer basis than ever.

Editorial

With the coming of spring comes also the change in leadership of various college organizations and enterprises. Not among the least of these, locally, is the change of the COLLEGE NEWS staff. Our time of service is rapidly drawing to a close, when we will lay down the work to let others continue it. The issue of next week will be the special Kalozetean Anniversary Number, and the following week the new staff will assume its duties.

The work of the past year has been very pleasant to every member of the staff. The suggestions received from alumni and friends were good and appreciated by the editors, and if they were not put into immediate use it was because of an impossibility to do so at the time. Student body, alumni and friends have stood by us nobly all the year. For their hearty support and interest we wish to thank them, for without them our efforts would have proved futile. The editors also wish to thank every member of the faculty from whom help and encouragement was received.

One may think little work is required and small responsibility is assumed in the publication of so small a paper. But to those in charge, it is important that the paper be the best paper possible, and that they receive all the help you and your friends are able to give.

So before going out of office, the present staff wishes to thank most heartily all who have rendered any assistance, and at the same time urge equal and increased interest and co-operation when the new board of Editors assumes its duties. We hope to announce our successors in next week's issue.

L. V. vs. GETTYSBURG

Will Meet on the Diamond at Gettysburg on Saturday

The second baseball game of the season will be played next Saturday with the Gettysburg College team. Every fellow should be out to practice every evening. Captain Harnish is working hard, and doing his best to develop a winning team. We believe he is doing all he can, and feel safe in saying that with the coaching he expects his team to get, we will not be disappointed. Don't be discouraged over the defeat last week. The boys played a splendid game and made a fine showing. They feel that they did their best, and why should the rest of the students feel down hearted over the outlook? Rather come out and help them to prepare for the next game and avoid another defeat. Give them all the encouragement you can, rather than find fault with the captain and manager. They are doing their part well and if you do yours in like manner a good season will surely result.

Root! Root for L. V. A.

The strictly "All Academy" baseball team met its first defeat on the home field last Saturday at the hands of the Annville Tigers. The day was extremely cold and the high wind made it very difficult to judge the ball.

Harry Denlinger was behind the bat and Irvin Kreider was in the box.

Meyer on first, Long on second, Dunlap on third Eby short stop, Light, Leister and Shannon completed the plucky little team that met the semi-professionals.

The boys played a splendid game considering that it was their first attempt for the season. Special men tion should be made of the battery. Clearheaded and unmoved by a slight lack of support from the field they fanned their opponents one by one. Runs were made by the Tigers chiefly on errors of the Academy team. These errors were made by inexperienced men who will make good with practice. The boys made a striking appearance in their new uniform—grey suits, red stockings and caps.

The best feature of the game was the spirit, whole souled united spirit, for L. V. A. Academy colors waved from the grandstand. Academy songs rent the air and Academy boys and girls promenaded the breezy grounds to keep warm and to show their ardor. This same spirit has paid their suits and has made it possible for them to offer on the home ground to all their friends at least eight games. Four hotly contested games will be with the Reading, Myerstown and Annville High schools and the Freshman class of Lebanon Valley College. The coming game is next Saturday April 8 on the home grounds with the Reading High School. Practice games will be held toward the close of the week. Let your colors fly that day, for L. V. A. is going to win.

Tickets are on sale at the book-store.

They can also be procured from members of the financial committee: Messrs. Long and Denlinger and Miss Brightbill. Price of tickets, fifteen cents. Season tickets guaranteeing at least eight games may be had for $1.00. L. V. C. tickets for the base ball season of the college also admit to the Academy games.

Friends of the college and Academy should encourage the pluck and loyalty that has characterized the work of the boys this year. They faced strong opposition. They overcame it gloriously, and now all are seeing that the cultivation of this spirit in the Academy must bring a richer athletic fruitage in the college in the years to come.

Thus while the boys were defeated by a score of 14 to 3 they had worked faithfully, they took their defeat heroically and have been nerved on to put a hotter contest for the coming Saturday. Who does not want to see it!

Mathematical Round Table

The regular monthly meeting of the Round Table was held Wednesday evening March 29, when a most interesting program was rendered. The program was one of the best the Round Table has ever had, and we were delighted with the splendid discussions on the part of the members following the rendition of the several numbers. L. L. Spessard gave a reading of mathematical stories which were humorous and yet not lacking in their mathematical significance. Oliver Butterwick then presented the nine point circle which proved a very interesting mathematical phenomenon. L. B. Harnish presented a discussion of the methods of teaching Mathematics. In his discussion he gave decided prominence to the laboratory method of teaching mathematics and was followed by a pro and con consideration of the merits and defects of such a method.

College Ministerium

A large percentage of members of the College Ministerial Association attended the regular meeting on Thursday evening in the Men's Dormitory. An interesting paper was read by A. S. Beckley, '12, on Sermonizing. Much valuable information was received from the paper. An open discussion followed. The next meeting will be held at the home of Phares Gibble on Maple Street.

Items of Interest

Mrs. Mary Rigler, of Annville will spend several days next week visiting her daughter, Margaret, who is attending Pratt Institute in Brooklyn.

Miss LaVerne Keister, will arrive at her home in Annville on Thursday to spend her spring vacation with her parents.

W. Albert Brunner, '11, made a business trip to Hershey on Friday evening.

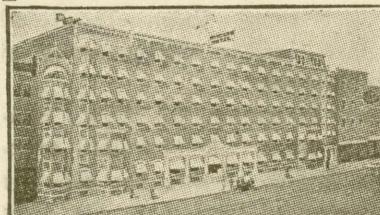

Donald Keister, '12, made a trip to New York on a week end visit to his sister, Miss LaVerne Keister, who is at present taking work at Pratt Institute.

Last Friday evening a number of students attended an entertainment given by the pupils of Miss Sallie Kreider's school. Miss Kreider who was a member of the class of '08 is teaching the Kreider School, located about four miles from Annville.

E. M. Gehr, '07, New Hampton, N. Y. writes that owing to the illness of his wife he has been unable to finish his course at Union Theological Seminary, and is now preaching at New Hampton.

Isaac Rissmiller, '06, Sup'r., Principal of the schools of Oxford township, Warren county, has shown a great deal of interest in his Alma Mater and will possibly have a student to send here, next year. Mr. Rissmiller graduated from U. P. with A. M. in 1909.

A. B. Hess, '01, City Supt., of schools of Larimore, North Dakota, has shown his loyalty to the school by paying his alumnal dues in full.

Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. Joint Session

The meeting on Sunday was led by Samuel O. Grimm, speaking on the topic "What Do We Have to Give to The World?" A missionary program was to be presented but through some misunderstanding no program was prepared. The leader selected a general missionary topic, and in answer to the question as to what we have to give to the Non-Christian world named four things that we have to give to those who know not God. First, we should teach them our conception of God; Second, our conception of man; Third, our idea of sin; and Fourth, our understanding of salvation.

The topic was then considered in its local significance and various persons gave us short remarks.

The Y. W. C. A. elected the following officers to serve the coming year: President, Lizzie Lau; Vice President, Bertha Spessard; Recording Secretary, Edna Kilmer; Corresponding Secretary, Florence Clippinger; Treasurer, Carrie Light; Pianist, Kathryn Moser.

CLIONIAN

KALOZETEAN LITERARY SOCIETY CELEBRATES THIRTY-FOURTH ANNIVERSARY

Splendid Program Rendered—Engle Hall Beautifully Decorated for the Occasion—Reception Tendered About Four Hundred Friends and Visitors

To one of the largest audiences seen at Lebanon Valley at an occasion of this kind, the Kalozeteans rendered their thirty-fourth anniversary program on Friday evening. After Keim's Orchestra had rendered several pleasing selections the speakers were ushered to their respective seats. Over four hundred people greeted the performers with their applause. In the sea of faces one could see many from Annville, Lebanon, Palmyra, Harrisburg, Myerstown, Everson, Philadelphia, New York and from nearby towns and cities. Over one hundred young people came up from Lebanon. Albright college was represented by about twenty members from the Neocosmian Literary society.

The decorations were simple artistic and original. In the chapel red and gold streamers, the colors of the society, were used to good advantage in a very beautiful arrangement, and suspended from the ceiling in front of the stage, was a large red banner with the word "Kalozetean" in gold letters. The numerals seventy-seven and eleven were very tastefully placed on each side, the former numeral being the date of organization. The stage was banked with palms and ferns, intermingled with the colors of the society. The whole combination presenting a very pleasing and excellent effect.

The entire program was well rendered and judging from the applause it was much appreciated. In fact every number on the program was a complete success.

Ivan J. McKenrick, '05, conservatory, now organist of First Presbyterian church at Ebensburg and practising law at the same place, was the first to appear on the program. He rendered in a masterful and very pleasing manner the organ prelude, the rendition of which was of the highest order and reflects great credit on his ability as a musician of the first rank, adding with much of the inspiration which Kalozetean has given to him, and showing that we may carry our society spirit with us into the practical affairs of life.

Mr. Chester E. Rettew, '12, in a new, smooth, and pleasing form delivered the first oration of the evening. He brought before his audience his theme in good style, with grace and clearness. His subject "As a Man Thinketh" was treated thoroughly, and he showed how the power of thought had influenced civilization, bringing man to his present position; above the beasts and a "litt'e lower than the angels." He captivated his audience at the start, and held their attention throughout.

The, "Plantation song" given by a carefully trained chorus of nine voices was one of the most enjoyable numbers on the program. The chorus consisted of Messrs. Frost, Reed, Shearer, Hayes, Charlton, Ulrich, Young, Gibble, Long.

Mr. J. W. Ischy, oratory, '11, college, '12, gave an excellent reading and his selection of "Scenes from the Rivals," showed good taste. He presented with his characteristic force, vividness of imagination and clearness of enunciation this great masterpiece. In his interpretation of the characters he showed rare ability, keeping the attention of his audience focused during the entire rendition of his part. As the production was humorous and entertaining it added in a marked degree to the success of the program.

W. O. ELLIS

greatly to the success of the evening's program.

The Rev. S. Edwin Rupp, '02, pastor of the Trinity United Brethren church, Lebanon, Pa., offered the Invocation.

Francis Richard Kennedy, '11, in his usual clear, forcible and original way delivered the president's address. It was in fact an oration based upon the "Value of Exchange," interwoven

Mr. William Otterbein Ellis, '11, in his unique, forcible and eloquent manner presented his theme "Dreams and Dreamers" to an appreciative audience. He enlisted the keenest attention from the beginning to the end. His oration abounded in illustrations drawn from nature and life. There were pictures of real and beautiful images, and his production deserves to be the best that has been delivered in recent years, adding new laurels to this oratorical son of Kalozetean. He held his audience spellbound, had great control over his voice, treating sympathetically this great subject.

Mr. Frederick Light, '00, rendered two violin solos with his usual skill and again demonstrated to the admiring crowd his great musical talent.

What turned out to be the most original as well as the most attractive number on the program was the production of Mr. Fred Frost, '11. The Essayist departed from the usual custom and presented "A Bard of Erin."

The writer showed rare ability in dealing with Thomas Moore and his reading of the essay was good and at the same time so sympathetic as to win the genuine applause of the crowded audience.

As a climax to his essay a mixed quartette, consisting of Mrs. Dr. Gerberich and Miss Edith Frantz of Lebanon, Harry Ulrich, '14, of Harrisburg and Alfred Strickler, of Lebanon, rendered one of Moore's best known selections. The silence maintained in the audience was sufficient testimony to the greatness of this part. The quartette needs no commendation for it was of the highest order, rendered with accuracy melody and harmony. This part was a pleasant surprise to everyone present and was appreciated accordingly.

Keim's orchestra concluded one of the best programs that has ever been given in recent years. It was a complete success.

A reception was held immediately afterwards in the halls of Kalo at which over four hundred guests were served with refreshments consisting of punch, ice cream and cake. The society halls were very beautifully decorated with numerous pennants, banners and steamers of red and gold. It was a brilliant gathering, many of the fairest daughters of Annville, Palmyra, Harrisburg, Everson and Lebanon were present. Great credit is due to the untiring efforts of the various committees. The chairmen of the various committees were, Messrs. Kennedy, Ellis, Snavely, Lyter, Williams and Chas. Ulrich.

President's Address

The Value of Exchange

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: In behalf of our society I extend to you a most cordial and hearty welcome to these our Anniversary exercises. We ask you to join with us in celebrating this occasion with hearts overflowing with peace and friendship.

In eighteen seventy-seven Kalozetean was born. Since that time we have been going onward, upward, forward. We have been walking on that untrodden path that leads ultimately to the realization of our ideal.

KALOZETEAN, the word meaning as most of you know, "seekers after the beautiful," for four and thirty years we have been seeking the beautiful in every sense of the word and every mile-stone on our path seems to be electrified tonight. The arc-light of past Anniversaries seems to be reflected in all its brilliancy on this occasion.

During all these years, in the circle that we call KALOZETEAN, we have cherished each others ideals and shared our griefs and sorrow. We have seen as it were, the sun rising in the East and mounting on its way toward the Zenith, slowly we have seen it sink in the West and disappear. While in the silent watches of the night its soft light has been reflected from the varied constellations of the heavenly bodies: and as the sun was lost to sight, so from many of us our hopes and our ambitions have faded and during these years of difficulty only the blackness of despair could be seen. Tonight, KALOZETEAN offers up her grateful praise to the loyal men, who, during her history have striven, triumphed and made it possible for our organization to exist.

As we look back on our history, years of hopefulness, achievement and progress, we would not forget those of our number who are not with us tonight, whose names have been written. Especially one, who, in recent years endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact. The name of Harvey Herr may not be found on the scroll of fame: but in our circle we honor and will revere his memory.

YOU may ask us and we may ask ourselves these questions. What has produced this result? What has made it possible for our organization to exist so long? We cannot answer fully these questions tonight; but one of the prime factors in producing this result is due to the principle of exchange. Young men have found within our halls something to exchange with each other. As our motto 'Palma non sine pulvere' no palms without dust, would lead us to believe, we exchange no easily acquired virtue, nor any unworthy thoughts; but we exchange those things of life that are worth while, those things that endure, those that are eternal.

Many young men have passed through our halls during these thirty and four years, and have gone forth to meet with the many problems of life. THEY have seen corruption in every form, they have realized what the struggle for existence really means and they have felt the need of the material things of life as well as the spiritual things. Their characters had to be tested in the lurid heat of worldliness; but if they have carried with them the spirit of Seventy-Seven, that we cherish here. This KALO spirit will sustain them.

From the nucleus of social service men today are extending their influence in all directions and receiving unconscious though it may be, something in return. Never have college men and women been so actively associated in extending the principles of a worldwide democracy. Allow me to refer you to a few examples of this same principle, the BIG BROTHER movement in New York, the workers in our juvenile courts, the missionaries in our cities and in the Foreign field, the Y. M. C. A. workers, as well as the church workers and quite recently the BIG SISTER work has been inaugurated. All these activities illustrate very well the method of exchange.

In every direction this principle is in operation. The student by our side lacks something that we can give to him and we need something that only he can give us. The college professor has his claim on us and we demand something from him in return. Not merely, the details of a science, the mastery of a language, the accumulations of history and philosophy, or even all these added together; but he craves for and we hunger after personality.

By coming in contact with men and women of noble ideals and worthy lives we learn instinctively the true value of life. We see life, not only, as a time in which to accumulate a fortune, not only as a time in which to saturate our minds with book-lore, nor as a time in which to gain an unfair advantage over our brother. However, we should see life as a time for exchange. We should learn the true lesson of service, the real value of exchange. If we should be inspired by some noble life I think we would feel the responsibility of extending to others who may be less fortunate than we are, or who may have a less limited vision, the real value of exchange.

There are more men needed in this age, who will be cheerfully willing to exchange with others. Of all the varied forces which men possess, nothing is more desirable for exchange today than sunshine. For as physical sunshine is necessary in order that leafy plants may grow and develop to their full size and maturity.

For we know that the sun's rays must penetrate their leafy structures and assist in building up the complex tissues so that finally the full glory of the plant may blossom forth, reproduce and bring forth like plants.

So then in the same way we need seek the radiating sunshine of healthy optimism from the Great Source if we desire true success. Having found this power-house we can go forth among men charged with this energy, to shed our light in the dark places, where men women and children need it so much. Where the children are being stunted by the grasping hand of the greedy parasites of the industrial world, who force them to labor long hours for a low wage, or to accept the only alternatives, degradation or starvation. WE can shed this light in the places where disease germinates and where crimes are bred. The social unrest of the present is in need of this soothing influence.

Let us crystallize our appreciation of life into sweet charity for all. Radiate Optimism! Be Optimistic! May we not shed this light of healthy optimism in the places where it is needed and forget the trivialities of life that hinder the smooth running of our life's course. Let the full glory of our personality cast its soft, golden and mellowing light upon some weary soul, so that they seeing our hopefulness may be lifted to higher ground and viewing with us the vista of a greater civilization, may hear with us the harmonies yet unheard while with their imagination they may conceive the beauty that formerly was hidden from them. Or as PAUL quotes from ISAIAH, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which GOD has prepared for them that love HIM."

As a Man Thinketh

Following is the oration delivered by Chester E. Rettew, in condensed form.

TRULY has it been said, that a man's character is a great and beautiful image, hidden by wondrous mists, and that the image which finally is seen, when the mists have been rolled away, is the image which is made by the man's own Ideal, and his effort toward that Ideal. No man has a right to remain where he will be constantly subjected to the great temptations of poverty, nor secluded behind the mists of ignorance, hiding himself from the awakening light of intelligence.

The speaker showed that man is not like dumb driven cattle, prodded on, not able to resist the force behind, but was made in the image of God, to have dominion over the earth. Man must develop the talent which distinguishes him from the beast. That prosperity begins in the mind and that as long as our mental attitude is hostile to our Ideal, we will never realize it. Quoting Marden, he showed that there are plenty of evidences in man's construction and environment, that he was made for infinitely grander and more superb things, than the most fortunate of men now possess and enjoy. But that we cannot attain these superb things by thinking they are impossible, for no man can become prosperous, while he really expects or half expects to remain poor, for we tend to get what we expect, and to expect nothing is to get nothing, and we cannot work for one thing and expect something else. Everything is created mentally first. Want, lack and unhappiness do not fit man's divine nature. Too many people do not have enough faith in the good things intended for them, and are too often satisfied with the common place things of life, not striving for what they desire.

He referred to history and showed what a difference the Ideal dwelling in a man's heart makes in his own life. When Napoleon wanted to follow his Ideal to get the thing for which his eager soul longed, he believed he could accomplish it and went at it, expecting to do so. There were no Alps for him. Showing that prison doors did not hinder Galileo from making discoveries in Science, nor blindness check the great intellect of Euler, the mathematician, the speaker proved that a man with an invincible purpose in him is not daunted by difficulties, but is bound to succeed.

In an interesting manner he showed how Columbus discovered America, because he believed in himself. That amidst the most trying conditions, and in the face of great difficulties, he did what other men thought impossible because he believed he could... the cherishing and entertaining of such a marvelous thought developed into such a marvelous deed.

A general spends almost as much time in making his plans as in executing them. Just as an architect knows how the building will look, even before the ground is broken, just so is every thing we do, the outcome of our thoughts, and our mental attitude must correspond to the reality we seek. No matter what may be our Ideal, unless our mental attitude corresponds to it, we shall never realize it. Had Columbus cherished his Ideal, with the thought that it was impossible, he never would have crossed the Atlantic. Educators say, that thoughts are things that are incorporated into the life and become part of the character, and that if we harbor a low thought, if we entertain a mean or selfish thought, that Thought will serve as a means to attract us in that direction. But on the other hand, if we cherish a noble thought, if we harbor a lofty Ideal in our mind and put forth every effort in pursuit of that Ideal, our lives will eventually correspond.

Our whole being is simply our mind in action. If our mind consists of good and noble thoughts, we ourselves will be good and noble. We will never amount to more than our Ideal; neither will we amount to as much if our mental attitude is hostile to it. To reach prosperity—to attain success—to be of help to the world we must give something to the world. If we can give no more, we can give ourselves. But what good will we be to the world unless we have made the most of the best that is in us; unless we have developed our talent; unless we have a lofty Ideal, in fact, the highest possible Ideal, and unless we set our whole mental being, and therefore ourselves in pursuit of that Ideal?

If our Ideal is the best possible, our striving toward it will so mix the elements in us

"That nature might stand up and say to all the world 'This was a man.'"

Scenes from "The Rivals"

The quarrel and the reconciliation scenes from "The Rivals," by Sheridan. Characters: Sir Anthony Absolute; Captain Jack Absolute.

Previous to these two scenes, Captain Jack, under the assumed name of Beverly has won the affections of Miss Lydia Languish and has come to Bath to make arrangements to elope with her. In the meantime his father, Sir Anthony has also arrived at Bath and he and his old friend Mrs. Malaprop have made arrangements that Jack is to marry the latter's niece, Lydia Languish.

In "The Quarrel" scene Sir Anthony announces to Jack that he has decided that Jack shall marry a certain young lady, but does not tell him who the lady is. The Captain refuses to promise to marry the girl without knowing who she is. This angers Sir Anthony and he goes out in a passion declaring he will never see Jack again, not appeal to her, at the time of the year according to the words of Longfellow,

"The bird sing in the thickets,
The streamlets laugh and glisten,
And all the air is full of fragrance."

And we gifted with the seeing eye have pity for that stricken girl, but little do we realize that in some sense we are all Helen Kellers and that ours is a Helen Keller world.

Suppose that by magic our eyes could be opened that we could see the filmy lines of light that reflect for us the landscape and the morning sky, that we could see the waves of sound that bear to us the carolling of the lark, that we could see without the aid of the microscope the many and beautiful forms of plant and animal life that do exist. Suppose that we could look into our future lives and see the realization of our visions, our ideals; see our minds as they are and as they act.

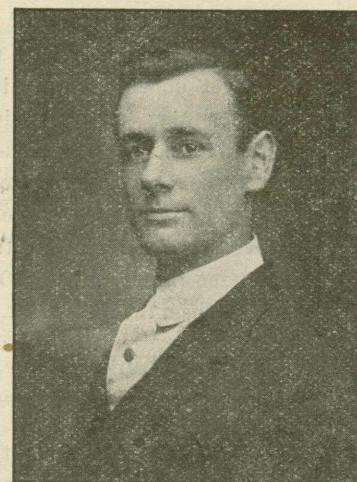

Would not this world of ours seem as weird and as entrancing as our visible world would appear to Helen Keller, could she but receive her sight?

Yet beyond all that the eye can see, the ears can hear, the hands can feel, beyond either taste or smell, I say beyond any native sense at all, there lies an unseen, unfelt, unheard universe, whose fringe we are just feebly perceiving.

It is true it is a visionary, idealistic world. But the dreamers are the saviours of this world. As the visible forms of nature are sustained by the invisible so men and women, in their trials and sins and sordid vocations are nourished by the beautiful visions of their solitary dreamers. Humanity will not forget its dreamers, it cannot let their ideals fade and perish. But it lives in them and as someone has said, "Humanity knows the dreams of its benefactors as the realities which it shall one day see and know."

Composer, sculptor, painter, inventor, poet, sage, these are the makers of the after world. The very architects of the universe. The world is beautiful because they have lived, without them laboring humanity would gradually die.

But he who has a beautiful dream, a lofty ideal in his heart shall one day realize it; Columbus cherished a vision of another world and he discovered it; Sir Isaac Newton fostered a vision of and disowns him. Between the two scenes Jack has discovered that his father wants to force him to marry the girl with whom he was planning to elope. So when he meets his father again he pretends that he has repented of his obstinacy and is willing to marry the girl his father desires him to marry. Sir Anthony is delighted, forgives Jack at once, and arranges for a meeting between his son and the young lady.

Dreams and Dreamers

The following is the substance of the oration delivered by Mr. W. O. Ellis.

ALTHOUGH we know something of the worlds about us, yet is it not a fact that our thoughts and minds wander below the horizon into a sub-conscious realm comparatively unknown. Into a realm of visions, a realm of dreams. And we feel as Sir Isaac Newton, "with all our knowledge, like gathering shells on an infinite sea." Many are the worlds about us. Helen Keller lives in a peculiar, invisible and intangible sphere. In her world floats no sound, the rustle of the forest, the harmonies of music, the magic of the spoken word enlist no thrill. Dawn and dusk, days and seasons are alike. The glory of summer, the colors of October are known to her only through the dim changes, in the warmth of her skin. Springtime does gravitation and from the very time he saw the fall of the apple in the garden the fate of astrology was sealed; John Bunyan had a dream of a spiritual world of stainless beauty and perfect peace and he entered into it.

Angel has said: "To desire is to obtain; to aspire is to achieve." Shall man's basest desires receive the fullest measure of gratification and his highest aspirations starve for lack of sustenance? Such is not the law, such a condition of things can never exist, but is it not rather as that still small voice has said: "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

Dream lofty dreams, for as one dreams so shall he become. Carlyle has said, "A dream is a promise of what you shall one day be, an ideal is the prophesy of which you shall at last unveil."

The greatest achievement was at first and for a time a dream. There stands the majestic oak in all its splendor, its beauty, and its magnificence. But how few of our memories go back to the time when this gigantic tree was asleep in the acorn. And, as nature's forces come to bear upon it, it germinated, and by its gradually absorbing a little nourishment here and there among the hard particles of earth it breaks through the ground, pale, sickly, and famished.

These conditions are not of long duration, for as the rising sun spreads its warming rays over Mother Earth the seedling takes on a new birth, in fact a new vitality and so with the advancing summer this seedling is no longer a puny, delicate plant, but has become transformed into a vigorous and hardy young oak tree. As years roll around this tree grows in size and stature, until it stands as a magnificent oak. A dream developed. A dream realized. Dreams; dreams, my friends, are nothing more than the seedling of realities.

Your circumstances may be uncongenial, but they shall not long remain so if you but perceive an ideal and strive to reach it. "One cannot stand still within and travel without." Just as a youth hard pressed by poverty and labor, unschooled and lacking all the arts of refinement, dreams of better conditions. He thinks of intelligence, of refinement, of grace and beauty. Unrest urges him to action; a vision of a larger field takes possession of him and he utilizes all his spare time and means to the development of his latent powers and resources. Very soon, so altered has his mind become that the work-shop can longer hold him. It has become so out of harmony with his mentality that it falls out of his life as a garment is cast aside. With the growth of his intellectual ability he passes out of it forever. Years later we see this youth as a full grown man, as a master of certain forces of the mind which he wields with world wide influence and almost unequalled power. In his hands he holds the cords of gigantic responsibilities, he speaks and behold lives are changed. Men and women hang upon his words, remould their characters, and as the sun is the center of our Solar System about which this earth and her neighbor planets revolve in one grand degree of harmony, so he becomes the fixed and luminous center around which innumerable destinies revolve. He has realized the vision of his youth, he has become one with his ideal.

And you too my friends will realize the vision of your hearts be it base, or beautiful, or a mixture of both, for truly has Elbert Hubbard said, "one always gravitates toward that which he secretly most loves." Into your hands will be placed the exact results of your own thoughts. You will receive that which you earn, no more, no less. You will become as strong as your controlling desire, as high as your dominant aspiration. In a word whatever your circumstances may be you will remain, rise or fall with your thoughts, your dreams, your ideals

A Bard of Erin

SOCIETY, as long as it can be moved to tender sympathy, will never allow the beautiful charms and harmonious strains of a true poet to die. This ultimatum we accept as true. The sounds of the lyre and the passionate fire of poetry charms both the skilled and the unskilled, the brain worker or the body toiler. It gives to them in their idle hours of relaxation, higher aspirations, greater happiness, true courage and world wide success. For this reason Thomas Moore, a type of the auld sod is fresh in the memory of England and especially of Ireland, as the day when he first began to write.

His mind was stirred by the soft, velvety, charms of music. His education in this art began early for at the age of ten he was an apt scholar of Samuel Whyte, producing imitations of his master's works. His first yearning for music was stimulated by a wise, kind, ambitious mother. His first musical instrument was an old harpsichord which was soon replaced by a pianoforte. Time was to show that this was the fountain from which was to flow his sweet, sparkling genius. "Music," said Moore thirty years afterwards, "was the only art for which was born with real national love, my poetry such as it is has sprung out of my true feelings for music." Every one who is familiar with his lyrics will say, true. As a song writer Moore has never been surpassed.

A calm, still, gentleness creeps over us as we read slowly, ebbing and flowing over his tide of passion,

Tis the last rose of summer
All her lovely companions
Are faded and gone;
No flower of her kindred
No rosebud is nigh,
To reflect back her blushes
Or give sigh for sigh.

I'll not leave thee, thou, lone one
To pine on the stem;
Soon the lovely ones sleeping
Go, sleep thou with them;
Thus kindly I'll scatter
Thy leaves on the bed,
Where thy mates of the garden
Lie scentless and dead.

So soon I may follow
When friendship's decay
And from love's shining circle
The gems drop away;
When true hearts lie withered
And fond ones are flown;
Oh! Who would inhabit
This bleak world alone?

A great number of hymns are due to his untiring pen. The greatest is.

"Come Thou Disconsolate."

His country had long wanted for a hand which would do justice to the matchless airs which Moore himself said defied all poetry to do. No country had more themes to expand of cruel, relentless oppressions, wit and pleasantry. With the aid of the musical taste of Stevenson and Powers, the publisher, the finest airs of Ireland were sought out which are known as the Irish Melodies. A spirituality of his song floats intangibly upon the hearts and ears of the people, the bodies of angels, as it were, floating around in the air from which tune they should never be discovered. Moore says that "the power of music is as great as the force of his poetry that if it were detached from his poems the interest of the people would be greatly diminished."

One of his best melodies showing his wit and cleverness is,

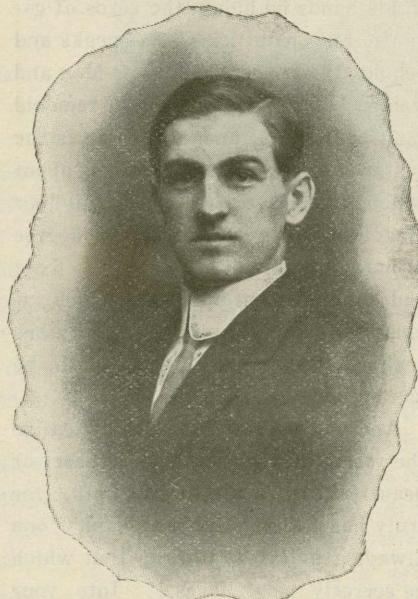

The time I lost in wooing,
In watching and pursuing;
The light that lies
In womans eyes
Has been my hearts undoing.
Though wisdom oft has sought me
I scorned the lore she brought me
My on'y books
Were woman's looks
And folly's all they've taught me.

No man was better fitted than he in the lighter vein of satire. Few wielded the weapon more surely or adroitly than he, sending stinging arrows from his ever ready quiver, Arrows tinged with the sharpest sarcasm, winged with feathers from the swan song. His irony was aimed at the Prince of Wales. But his wounds were not poisonous, for the injured ones soon got over his slights and smiled at them. His best satirical works are, Corruption, Intolerance and the Skeptic. It was in the singing role of the troubadour not the gown of the moralist that he shone most advantageously.

What need is there for a higher criticism of one whose works show such high genius. Can any nation produce a more polished or superior lyrist. The vigor of Burns is surpassed by the gracefulness of Moore. He was a firm determined patriot, who loved to be in the limelight of society because of its strength, refinement and accomplishments. His character shows strong determination else he would have been spoiled by the petting and pamperings of the idle rich. He was the soul of a self respected and noble nature.

Of all the songs the one most known and best loved is today sung all over the English speaking world and its tender words will live as long as memory lasts.

"Believe me if all those endearing young charms which I gaze on so fondly today,
Were to change by to-morrow and fleet in my arms,
Like fairy gifts fading away.
Thou wouldst still be adored as this moment thou art
Let thy tenderness fade as it will.
And around the dear ruins each wish of my heart
Would entwine itself verdently still."

Echoing down through these years has come this masterpiece of song which Tom Moore has given us. Its beautiful melody sounding alike in mansion or cottage loved both by high and low, and although Tom Moore's body has crumpled to dust and its ashes of dead years gather upon his memory, the child of his poetic fancy lives and it seems that the echo of its lovely harmony comes again to me tonight.

J. W. Ischy, a senior in the oratory department gave a recital at Lititz on the evening of April 8th, Mr. Ischy read to a very appreciative audience and many of those present expressed a desire to hear him again.

Obituary

Last year our society lost through death a most faithful and trusted member. Mr. Harvey E. Herr was born October 17th 1887 and died from typhoid fever August 10, 1910. He graduated from Annville High School in 1903; Lebanon Business College, 1906; Lebanon Valley Academy, 1908 and had he lived he would have been graduated from Lebanon Valley College this year.

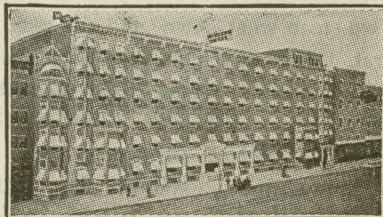

The Kalozetean Literary Society will always cherish his memory and it will never forget his ability in the class room, neither will the individual umpire who selfconfessedly hadn't seen a rule book for three years and who evidently cribbed his exams in a correspondence school. Gettysburg came to bat at the end of the seventh with the score 4 to 1 in favor of L. V. Two men went down and one got to first. The next man had three balls called on him. When Little lined the next one over the man on first started to steal. Nelson throws the ball to second in time to catch his man. The umpire called him out. Our boys came running in, while the man caught at second galloped home closely pursued by the batter, the umpire having called the fourth ball. Smith asked the umpire who had picked up the ball to give it to him to tag the second runner, but the learned official said there were three outs. Under the persuasion of Gettysburg the umpire reversed his decision calling the man safe at second, because the fourth ball demanded a force, even tho the man started to steal before the ball was delivered. The two runs were donated to Gettysburg, instead of recalling the runners to the bases held at the "out." Rather than forfeit, our men scared the next men out. Nelson and Hummel were the star batters. Little was in fine form.

LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE

Volume II.

Annvile, Pa., Tuesday, April 18, 1911

No. 28

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annvile, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Delaware 5-L. V. 5

Lebanon Valley played its third game of the season with the strong Delaware State collega team at Newark, Delaware, last Tuesday. This was the second tie game. The weather was ideal for baseball and put spirit into both teams, however, our boys after their long ride were a little nervous when the game started.

Carmony and Hummel through a mis-understanding allowed a fly ball which could easily have been fielded by either, to drop between them. This coupled with two errors and a scratch hit gave Delaware three of their five runs, in the first inning. No runs were scored on either side in the second inning, Delaware's fourth run came in the third inning on a passed ball by Nelson. In the fourth inning Delaware scored its fifth and last run on an ugly grounder to Carmony which could only have been fielded with great difficulty.

As the game progressed our boys regained their nerve and put all their force into the last inning. Captain Harnish opened the game in the fifth inning with a pretty single to right field. Hummel followed with a two bagger. Errors on the part of Delaware and good base running on ours brought in five runs before the game was brought to an end by a double play on Smith's fly to second.

The game was called at 4:10 to allow our team to catch the train. We feel quite confident that Lebanon Valley would have come back with a victory instead of a tie could she have had the full nine innings in which to play. Little pitched a good game and Nelson did some good work behind the bat.

Will Play on the Diamond at Annville,
Saturday, April 22

The first home game of the season will be played next Saturday at 3 p. m. with the strong Albright college team on the home field. This game, with out question, will be one of the most interesting and exciting of the season, for Albright is one of L. V.'s old rivals in this sport.

L. V. has been making a good showing in the first three games of the season and it is hoped that this good showing will keep up until the end. Let this game be no tie, but a victory for Lebanon Valley. Two ties in one season and those coming in succession should be sufficient.

Every fellow should be out for practice each evening and lend a helping hand to develop a strong team for this game. The manager and captain are putting forth all efforts to get the team in condition and if every person will co-operate with them we feel confident that Saturday's game will be a success.

On Saturday afternoon may each co'ed sing, "Take me out to the ball game."

Commencement Orator

The senior class takes this opportunity to announce that the orator for the coming commencement exercises will be the Honorable Franklin Spencer Edmonds, of Philadelphia. Mr. Edmonds is one of the most prominent lawyers of the Philadelphia Bar, and is a finished orator. He is strongly connected with the largest movements for the improvement of civic conditions in Philadelphia. Mr. Edmonds comes very highly recommended and the class takes great pleasure in making this announcement.

Anniversary

The Biological Field club will celebrate its anniversary Friday April 21, at 8 p. m. Dr. Duncan S. Johnson, professor of Botany in Johns Hopkins University, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Plant Life of a Tropical Island." The lecture will be illustrated by lantern slides made largely from photographs taken by Dr. Johnson while conducting research work in Jamaica. This lecture will without doubt be a great treat for all. It will be held at 8 p. m. in Engle Conservatory after which the club will give an informal reception.

Sr.-Junior Council Election

The election of the members of the new Sr.—Jr. Council has just been completed. The Senior members elect are Messrs. O. T. Ehrhart, Artus O. Kauffman, S. G. Ziegler, Wm. O. Ellis and J. K. Lehman.

The Junior members elect are Messrs. S. O. Grimm, Oliver Butterwick, Guy Wingerd, and Arthur S. Beckley.

The new council will be organized in a few days and will be prepared to take hold of student government so long neglected, during which time everybody did as they pleased and the identity of classes was entirely lost.

Editorial

With this issue the new staff of editors assumes charge of the production of this paper. A glance above will give the personnel of the staff. The time of the year has come when Seniors are exceedingly busy for theses must be written and preparation must be under way for the on coming commencement day. To give the Senior members of the old staff an opportunity to finish their work in good time, they have been granted permanent leave of absence and the new staff selected a little earlier than formerly. While we are not hunting any more work than seems to be necessary at this time of year when spring fever is in season and when temptations to go along the line of least resistance are around us, we heartily approve of the departure, and which doubtless is much appreciated by those whose college days are rapidly drawing to a close.

The work of the ex-staff has been so good, that we timidly undertake to continue their work. We hesitate because we feel that it is going to cost us our best efforts to keep the paper up to the standard set by our predecessors. But we kindly ask of you, the readers of this publication, to be patient with us until we learn our new responsibilities and can adjust ourselves to the new places. We are green upon this job, and doubtless will make many mistakes, but your kind indulgence, and helpful suggestions will assist us in taking up our new duties and in making of this paper a publication commensurate with the works and the standards of our college.

In this paper we endeavor not only to interest our own students in the many activities around the college, but particularly to keep in touch with the alumni, to keep them informed of the progress of their alma mater, and to keep alive in their minds their interests in its welfare, to interest the friends of our institution, and to assist our prospective students to decide for Lebanon Valley.

We are ambitious to make this paper the best that it can possibly be made. To do this, we need your suggestions and help, and we shall always be ready to receive your aid. If you see a point in which we can make improvements do not hesitate to inform us. Come, help us to make this paper your ideal of a college publication.

Finally, we desire to thank those concerned in conferring upon us the honor and responsibilities of the task.

Mathematical Round Table

Will render its monthly program Wednesday night, April 19, at Prof. Lehman's house on Main Street. The following is the program: On the Curriculum of Mathematics, Clair F. Harnish; Mathematics among The Ancient Greeks, Russel Weidler.

Remember the Date—April 20, 1911

In order to create a fund to equip Engle Conservatory with window shades and make all other improvements necessary for a more pleasing auditorium for the presentation of plays and recitals, the Oratory and Music Departments will present a "double header" in said conservatory Thursday evening April 20, 1911.

The "players" are practicing diligently for the event.

Oratory will offer a pleasing little Comedy entitled "Snowbound," in which the peculiar incidents attached to a railroad wreck resulting in several parties being snowbound in a mountain hotel are presented very interestingly.

The Music Department is preparing to present one act of the opera, "The Pirates of Penzance." The rehearsals promise a very interesting production of a part of that delightful opera so familiar to us all.

These Departments deserve our support in this vital matter. The need of certain improvements is apparent to all. The equipment which is to be procured will add very much to the aesthetic impressions of all future productions.

Profs. Adams and Sheldon are positive that one of the most pleasing entertainments of the year will be given here Thursday evening, April 20, 1911 at 8 o'clock. Admission 25 cents, reserved seats 10 cents extra.

Items of Interest

Frank Shearer, '13, accompanied the team to Newark, Delaware, Tuesday day last.

Messrs. Brunner, Loser and Lehman stopped over at Philadelphia Tuesday evening to "sit up with a friend."

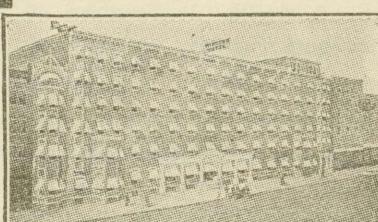

Geo. Mark Smith, formerly of L. V., now a student at State is spending a few days in town.

The majority of the students were at their respective homes over Sunday eating Easter eggs.

Academy Banquet

On Tuesday evening, April 11, the Academy entertained their baseball team in the house belonging to the United Brethren church, on the corner of Main Street and College Avenue.

All of the rooms were tastily decorated in the Academy colors, red and black. Various games were played until about nine-thirty, when all were shown to the dining room where a large table was laid, also beautifully decorated with the colors. The following menu was served: Fruit salad, fried oysters, baked beans, sour cherries, bread and butter sandwiches, salted nuts ice cream, cakes. After the menu the toastmaster, Samuel Groh called the following toasts. "Our Base-ball Season," Prof. H. E. Spessard; "Our Girls," Harry Denlinger; "Our Boys," Helen Brightbill; "Our Base-ball Team," Sedic Rine. The baseball team has been doing excellent work this season and well deserved all the praise received in the toasts.

The happy evening ended appropriately with the Academy yells.

L. V. vs. York Tri-State

TUESDAY, APRIL 25

Lebanon Valley's fifth scheduled game will be played, providing the weather man will permit, this afternoon with York Tri-State at York. The boys are anxious for this game because they were cheated out of playing a game last Saturday with Albright, on account of the wrong consignment of weather.

The team left on the 11:12 a. m. train in the best of spirits and feeling that they will do themselves and the college credit in this game. The team has lost one game's experience which they needed badly before going up against the strong York Tri-State team.

BASE BALL BINGLES

Biological Field Club

The Biological Field Club celebrated its third anniversary Friday evening, the 21st, Dr. Duncan S. Johnson, of Johns Hopkins University was the speaker of the evening, lecturing on "The Plant Life of Jamacia." Dr. Johnson took his audience upon a trip to this tropical island delightfully explaining to them everything concerning the plant life of the island and frequently touching upon the inhabitants. His lecture was splendidly illustrated by a large number of slides made from actual photographs taken upon a research expedition to Jamacia. To those interested in Biology his lecture was especially interesting from its scientific nature; to all others it was no less so because of the beautiful and natural pictures thrown upon the screen.

After the lecture the Club gave an informal reception to the Mathematical Round Table in the Biological laboratory. The laboratory has just been equipped with electric lights. After a social time refreshments were served.

New York State Accepts Lebanon Valley's Diploma

Augustus S. Doming, first assistant Commissioner of Education of the state of New York, has authorized the acceptance of the diploma, of Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa., in lieu of the preliminary law examination in that state. This means that the graduates of Lebanon Valley will be admitted to registration as law students in the state of New York without examination. During the deanship of Prof. Shenk, Lebanon Valley's diploma has been accepted in both the states of New York and Pennsylvania.

The local league is arranging for the reception and entertainment of the orators and delegates. A convention will be held Friday morning April 28, in the conservatory at which the business incident to the state contest and assembly will be transacted.

The local league feels proud in being able to offer the contest to the patrons and friends, as well as students, of Lebanon Valley college as a pleasing and profitable number of this year's attractions. The orators who will compete are either the winners of local contests, or the elected representatives of the respective colleges, which means that each institution is sending its best orator.

The winner of this contest will speak at an interstate Assembly to be held before the close of the scholastic year, when all the state prize orators will compete. The prizes for our state contest will be as follows: $50 for the best and $10 for the next best oration, judged according to both composition and delivery.

Editorial

In all human affairs some thing are bound to go wrong at some time or other, no matter what we do to the contrary. Such has been our experience during this year when more than the usual number of things seemed to be on the toboggan slide-way. Wherever men are associated together differences of opinion are bound to arise. Opinions upon any definite subject are a decided necessity for any one interested in that subject. But opinions that are unchangeable and cannot be modified to meet changing conditions may become a stumbling block in the way of progress. We have been the recipients of more than our desired share of such differences, and have been caused no little inconvenience and discomfort as a result. But we feel now that past disagreements have been adjusted finally and that the new will soon be in evidence.

During the past week the new council composed of Seniors and Juniors has been re-organized and is in a position to resume the duties of student government so abruptly discontinued by the ex-Council last October. Since that time there has been no organized system of government outside of the class room and the characteristic conditions of such a state of affairs were at hand. Everyone was governed by his own inclinations no matter whether his inclinations were decidedly out of harmony with his surroundings or not. Under such conditions nuisances and discomforts cannot help but arise. We have had our share.

The traditions of the college have suffered untold injury by the greater part of a college year of laxity and disregard of the experiences of the past. It cannot be hoped that the Council could in many way restore those traditions that make college life so pleasant and different from any other in the short time that is left before the close of this college year in June.

Those things will require a gradual course of rebuilding. But the Council can do much to prepare the way for the work of the coming college year. The work that they succeed in doing before the close of this year will be the foundations upon which the work of next year will have to be built. The better the work done this spring, the better will be the beginning of the same next fall.

The whole college has suffered from existing conditions. As closely as we can observe there is no real college spirit to be found among our students. This is an indifference resulting from the general downward trend. Athletic managers can persuade no one to assist in the little work that needs be done here. Whose fault is it? Underclassmen can hardly be blamed for telling you to go to, when they are allowed to feel that they are just as important as anyone around the college. Indifference has been our right hand man long enough. We hope for better things.

A visit to the Boy's dormitory will show that during the first week the committee of the council, known as the Dormitory Committee, has done some splendid work. May the good work continue until the said buildings will be kept clean and sanitary as it ought to be for human habitation.

Much is to be expected from the Council, but they cannot work alone. They must have the assistance of every one to make their work most pleasant and effective. It is to be hoped that such help will not be wanting, so that the remainder of this year shall be more pleasant than before and so that the new year may not open over shadowed by a cloud.

Oratorical Contest

The league expects a full turn out of the student body to support the speaker for L. V., who won the contest last year. More than this, the contest will offer a splendid side issue to a sociological study as each speaker will present some economic or social aspect of the liquor traffic.

The price of admission is 25 cents which includes reserved seats that can be secured at Spessard's Bookstore.

The league notices that Hon. Oliver W. Sternat, of Chicago, sole prohibition member of the Illinois legislature, an orator of exceptional ability, will speak in St. Marks Remformed Church, Lebanon, at 8 p. m. Friday, and recommends that anyone interested in this phase of social reform hear Mr. Sternat. Admission is free.

The "Benefit Entertainment"

The "Benefit Entertainment" program: A Scene from "The Pirates of Penzance," by Sullivan; Cast, Mabel, Miss Edith Gingrich; Edith, Miss Lottie Spessard; Kate, Miss Helen Brightbill; Isabel, Miss Evelyn Weidman; Frederic, Mr. Lester Spessard; Chorus—Misses Christeson, K. Bachman, Ely, Mozer, Lehman, Kershner, Spayd, Schell, Behney, Meyer, B. Spessard, Smith; Accompanist, Miss Meda Diehm; Comedy — "Snowbound," characters. Mrs. Romaine, Nona Downey Hockenbury; Kathleen Romaine, her daughter, Florence Christeson; Gordon Marlowe, Amos H. Weigle; Waiter, Lester A. Rodes. The above program was presented at the Engle Auditorium last Thursday evening. The hall was comfortably filled with a audience that manifested their appreciation of the excellence of the performances.

In "The Pirates of Penzance," the girls, each one carrying a white parasol, made a very pretty appearance indeed. And they very soon demonstrated that when it comes to singing they could make good, as well. The "Operetta" was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and everyone was sorry when it came to an end.

"Snowbound" was fully up to the high standard of work which the oratory department usually presents. The

No Game—Rain;

Mathematical Round Table

Prof. Lehman very delightfully entertained the Mathematical Round Table at his home on East Main Street, last Wednesday evening.

A short interesting program was rendered consisting of a carefully prepared paper on the "Curriculum of Mathematics" by Mr. Clair Harnish. Also a paper throwing light upon "Mathematics among the Ancient Greeks" by Russel Weidler.

After the program was rendered, several mathematical games were played which afforded much amusement. Elegant refreshments were served.

Sr.-Jr. Council

The Sr.-Jr. Council has been reorganized. O. T. Ehrhart was elected President and Guy Wingerd was elected secretary.

Y. M. C. A.

Sunday afternoon Y. M. C. A. was led by G. A. Richie. He took for his subject, The Past, Present and Future and read for a scripture lesson Hebrews 9:22-28. He distributed a number of slips containing topics appropriate to the subject. The topics were well discussed and added to the interest of the meeting. After the discussion of the topics the leader made a few closing remarks.

The attendance was poor, probably due to the cold atmosphere of the hall. The deficiency in attendance should be overcome, for this meeting could be made one of the most interesting of the Sunday services around the school. Each member should make himself responsible for the presence of some other man who does not attend, and in this way a better attendance will be assured.

Y. W. C. A.

The study of the life of Alice Freeman Palmer was taken up again for our meeting. Her life as a student at Michigan University, as a school teacher at different places, and as president of Wellesley was carefully discussed by the leader, Katherine Moser. The meeting in every respect proved very interesting and helpful.

YORK TRI-STATE

On Tuesday the college team journeyed to York where they played the Tri State team of that place. The game was well played, although marred by several errors on the part of Lebanon Valley, which cost most of the runs. Little was in fine form holding York down to nine hits. Smith played a great game at second. E. Miller played a sensational game in the field and at bat, having three bingles, one of them a two bagger to his credit. The game ended 12-4 in favor of York. L. V. vs. DELAWARE

Will Play on the Diamond at Annville on Friday, May 5

If the weather man will permit, L. V. will play its first home game with the strong Delaware state college team next Friday at 2:45 p. m. on the home field. This game, without doubt, will be a very interesting one, for the boys played them to a tie on their field at Newark, Delaware.

The boys have been making creditable scores on all their trips and there is no reason why they will not do the same on their home field. It is hoped that this game will be no tie but a victory for Lebanon Valley. Let each student do all that he can to encourage the team in their practice for this coming game. They need your support. If the right spirit is manifested a victory will be assured.

May each loyal student and friend come out to the game on Friday and give the boys the best of your "roots."

Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. held its Sunday afternoon service on the campus instead of in their hall on account of the beautiful outdoor conditions. Titus Leibold, the leader, read from Philippians 3:1-15 and based his talk on the "Consciousness of Unattainment."

He showed the practical and personal import to college students of having their ideals in God. Aim high so that if you come a little low of your mark you will still be high. Also it is not a sin to fail, it is a sin not to profit by one's failure.

The attendance was good and this added to the pleasant afternoon made the meeting a very interesting one.

Several of the men present gave short talks which were full of good thoughts and inspiration.

Prohibition Contest

The state intercollegiate Prohibition oratorical contest was held Thursday evening in the chapel. Eight colleges took part in the contest. The first prize of $50 was won by Gettysburg and the second prize of $10 by Grove City. All the speakers did very well and their orations showed thought and hard work. After the contest the club gave an informal reception for the orators and visitors.

The colleges represented and the speakers were as follows, Susquehanna, Samuel J. Garnes; Gettysburg, Frank Snyder; Juniata, William Judy; Albright, Roy M. Smith; Geneva, M. C. Mitchell; Grove City, J. C. McConnell; Lebanon Valley, Amos Weigle; Rutgers, Allen Campbell.

The judges of the contest were Rev. Fluck of Myerstown, J. C. Williams, of the State Department of Forestry and Dr. J. L. Lemberger, of Lebanon.

Alumni

Miss Emma Loos, '01, of Bern visited her sister in Annville last week.

Rev. E. O. Burtner, '90, Palmyra on Sunday morning and Rev. S. E. Rupp, '01, Lebanon, Sunday evening filled the pulpit in the local U. B. church.

Miss Dodge left for Massachusetts Thursday on account of the illness of her aunt.

Editorial

The Spring with garlands in her hands,

Came tripping into town,
But shuddered at the stony streets,
And houses gray and brown.
"Between these barren walls," she said,

"I could not live an hour,"
And fled away, but as she went
She dropped a tiny flower.
It found upon the cobblestones
A patch of shallow mold,
And there to every passer-by
Its tale of beauty told;
To palid toilers, bent and tired,
It spoke of grassy nooks,
The dewy pink of apple-trees,
The silver of the brooks.
A girl remembering purer things
Went home that very night;
A boy upon the downward path
Received its message bright;
A man next morning bought a cot
His little broad to rear
Where roses twined about the door,
And woods and fields were near
A ray of golden sunshine sent
To light the city gloom,
A missionary from a land
Of glory and perfume,
Lo! when it withered on the stem,
It left behind the seeds
Of good in many a callous soul,
To bloom in better deeds.

There are not many human beings that are not responsive to the beauties of a flower. Its purity suggests pure thoughts, its modesty and fragrance suggest service to others and its beauty and perfection suggest thoughts of God.

To us, who have the green fields and the trees, and best of all, the flowers all about us, these things lose much of their significance, and we pass by many a flower of greatest beauty because, forsooth, there are thousands of others just like it. But it makes our heart ache to think that there are multitudes of children and even men and women in certain districts of certain cities who have never seen the commonest flower. There are poor, pain-racked mortals who will be tossing on a hospital bed all this summer, without a friend to cheer them, perhaps, nothing to break the monotony of the days and nights of suffering, nothing to hope for, but death. What a blessing to such a one would be a tiny bunch of our most common flowers.

There are banks of violets, each one of which might be a blessing, but which we all pass by; there are mountains covered with arbutus each blossom longing in its heart to make some life brighter, but doomed to die unnoticed; a little later there will be groves of laurel blossoms, fields of daisies and wild roses, and then the wild aster and goldenrod. How easy would it be for you and me, not only to bring sunshine and joy and cheer into darkened and discouraged lives, but at the same time bring them the message of God's love and care for them, by merely putting forth the effort to pick a few flowers and passing them on to those who would consider them a blessing.

Now let us briefly sum up the situation: There are in the city, both in the slums and in the hospitals, thousands of our fellow human beings to whom a tiny flower would be a godsend, there are other men and women in the cities who are sacrificing their lives to make these unfortunate ones more happy; there are fields of wild flowers that droop and die unnoticed; there are students at Lebanon Valley College who will be in the country this summer where these wild flowers are in bloom; and there are express companies that will carry the flowers almost for nothing, in some cases absolutely free of charge.

Perhaps you will say these are only simple wild flowers and the men and women in the city could see no beauty in them. Perhaps the men and women who live on the boulevard in a brown stone mansion would not appreciate them. But you must remember that their esthetic taste has been trained only to see beauty in anything that has the tint of gold on it. Or perhaps you will say, the very poor do not care for the beautiful. Does not the poorest family that you know often take pride in the geranium in the old cracked teapot in their window? There are families in the city much poorer than the poorest family you know, but they have the same longing for the beautiful in their hearts.

There will be a wild flower club organized at Lebanon Valley College before commencement. The object of this club will be to gather some of those wild flowers of which nature has furnished such an abundance, and send them to the city where they may fulfill their mission by making brighter some unfortunate life.

Will you join this club?

BASE BALL BINGLES

Couldn't get Wagner's "Homer" with a "Trot."

Was the game at York fair because it was palyed on Fair grounds?

We earned our runs at York anyhow.

Smith squirms around second in "eely" fashion. Don't shout! Millers did. Is it base to bawl?

The pitchers had good handles in Saturday's game.

Lehman had the "longest" hit for L. V.

If the science of baseball continues to grow, a nine will become a six. Won't need fielders.

Y. W. C. A.

In a very informal outdoor meeting on Sunday afternoon, the Y. W. C. A. continued the study of the life of Alice Freeman Palmer. Miss Clara Horn led the meeting and brought out the leading facts concerning Miss Freeman's life as president of Wellesley college. She held this position for a period of six years, meeting with marked success in bringing about improvements in the college and exerting a tremendous personal influence upon the students.

The meeting proved interesting and helpful to all present.

Annoncement

On Monday evening May 8, Professor Shenk will lecture for the benefit of the United Brethren church on the subject "Thou Art the Man." The lecture is given under the auspice of the young Men's class of the local Sunday School.

Guy Wingerd, '12, accompanied the team to Millersville Saturday.

C. C. Smith and Guy Wingerd stopped off at Lancaster over Sunday.

PHILOKOSMIAN ANNIVERSARY NUMBER

LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE

Volume II.

Annville, Pa., Tuesday, May 9, 1911

No. 31

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

*Forty-Fourth Anniversary
Philokosmian Literary Society*

The Forty-fourth Anniversary exercises of the Philokosmian Literary Society were rendered in Engle Hall Friday evening May 5, 1911. One of the largest audiences ever present at a function of this nature at Lebanon Valley College assembled in the conservatory, where Keim's Orchestra was preluding the program of the evening. Every seat was taken and many were compelled to take places upon the gallery. There were present at least 450 people.

The Hall was tastefully decorated in old gold and blue, the colors of the society and the rostrum was decked with many palms and ferns.

The participants in the program were conducted to their seats on the stage, after which the invocation was given by Rev. H. B. Spayd, College pastor and ex-member of Philo. After an overture by the orchestra, the first speaker of the evening delivered his address. The applause of the audience as well as its profound stillness and attention gave ample testimony that the speakers and soloist were maintaining the standard for which the Philokosmian Literary Society has ever stood. The poise, abandon and delivery of the orators displayed an improvement over all renditions of the past.

Earl A. Spessard, '11, sang two solos in his usual pleasing manner. "Jean" by Burleigh and "Silent Night" composed by Max F. Lehman, '07, ex-member of the society.

The orations of W. A. Brunner, '11, O. T. Ehrhart, '11, W. C. Shoop, '11 follow and are self explanatory in respect to their thought and composition. We may add, however, that L. L. Spessard made a happy selection when he chose Riley's "Knee-deep in June" for a reading.

The last and best solo of the evening was sung by E. A. Spessard. For this number he selected Rotoli's "Mia Sposa La Mia Badnera." After the program was rendered the members and friends of the society were tendered a reception in Philo Hall, where refreshments were served at a reasonable you to these, the forty-fourth Anniversary exercises of the Philokosmian Literary Society. With great anticipation do we look forward to this annual occasion as the time set apart to do honor to the organization which we love next to our College itself. Your presence at the Anniversary exercises is not only a proof of your interest in us, but also a stimulus to continue firmly in the cultivation of the principles for which the Philokosmian Literary Society stands.

The main objects, for the realization of which we meet from week to week, are three in number: our own mutual improvement, the cultivation of musical and literary talent, and the promotion of moral and social activity. It is a good thing that in the present age a college education is in the reach of practically all who desire it; but it is a better thing that, in the smaller colleges at least, the opportunities of a literary society are available to all who take advantage of the college course. Then from the training of the literary society and the college comes the inculcation of the principles into the life of the student which form character. True, the college affords various courses of study for the development of the student, and in most cases, the end is realized. But what of all the pent up energy and force acquired from constant work in the classroom? What of the nervous strain from hard and steady work with the text books? The outsider may say, "Here is the place for college athletics or fraternities;" or he may name various modes of recreation to meet the demand. Yet with all that may be mentioned, there is something lacking. As to fraternities, they are too often impossible. And even tho many sports are enjoyed by different groups of students, and much as they are loved, nevertheless, most true college men have an underlying need which no form of athletics can supply. This need, this making practical of the theoretical, this greater degree of freedom, as it were, may be found in the literary society.

Each student meets questions in every-day life which must eventually be decided, but many hesitate to express their views in the presence of superiors. Thus in the class-room, very often the opinion of the Professor is taken as final, while on the athletic field, the coach or captain assumes responsibility. But who can come to the rescue in a literary society when equals face each other on common grounds; when the individual responsibility is more weighty; and when a decision must be reached, based on the judgment of the student? How can a greater dependence on self be fostered than by the literary training of such an organization, where freedom and expression of thought are nurtured, and where the aim is the encouragement of all that is manly? Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the necessity of procuring such development.

I have already referred to the making practical of the theoretical as a need which is supplied by the literary society. Men tell us that we are training while in college to become leaders in after life, and, relying on their superior judgment, we look forward more or less to that end. It is very evident however that for the student of today to become the leader of tomorrow, he must think and act quickly. A chief characteristic of the present era of American life is rapid thought and action on the part of those under responsibility. A measure is thought out, approved, and carried into action in such an incredibly short time that we pause, and wonder how it all happened. Do not understand me to say that a college course is entirely theoretical, for it is not. But in the pursuance of the average college curriculum, one meets a great many theories, some of which are valued as practical, while others are not. The college literary society affords the best opportunity for the application of these theories; for the transforming of them from mere theoretical dogma to practical truth of every-day life. It develops that coveted rapidity of keen thought which public speakers recognize everywhere as a most successful and ready weapon against an adversary.

Mention has also been made of greater freedom than that which is ordinarily obtained. In almost every college organization the powers higher than the student-body have some voice in the proceedings—not so in the literary society. This is one of the few organizations where the students rule supreme; where they assume entire responsibility; and where they are free to act they deem most advisable and proper. The man who really has both college and society at heart will also hold such privileges as these in proper respect, rather than overstep their lawful bounds by taking undue advantage of them.

As a society, we believe the principles for which we stand tend to develop the highest standard of manhood, and uphold a true sense of honor and efficiency which will count for much in after life. We also believe that the continual striving toward the goal which we have set will bring about the realization of the motto dear to every Philo heart, "Esse quam videri."

Once more, in the name of the Philokosmian Literary Society, I bid you, one and all, a most hearty welcome.

Ye Honest People

The long debate was over. The constitution was being signed by those men whose deliberations had brought it into being. A man burdened with years, yet filled with the enthusiasm of youth—Benjamin Franklin, whose life long devotion to American liberty and American institutions had borne rich fruit in that convention hall—pointed to a painting behind the speakers chair and remarked to some of his friends, "Often and often during the course of these sessions have I looked at that (sun) behind the speakers chair without being able to tell whether it was rising or setting, but now at length I have the happiness to know that it is a rising sun." That vision was prophetic. It was a rising sun.

Under the inspired leadership of those men upon whose shoulders the burden of responsibility for the success of the new government fell, that sun continued to rise. Sometimes, in the early dawn of the republic the mists of opposition obscured it from view. Clouds of discontent rising on every hand, threatened to deluge the land with fire and blood. As their shadows swept across the landscape, social mutterings and unrest from every quarter, like ominous thunder, smote the ears and chilled the hearts of the staunchest men. Still with souls unsullied, fearlessly they met their tasks, and the sun rose higher, piercing the rifts and warming to life our early national spirit.

Time, from his immeasurable urn, has poured sweet balm upon the troubled hearts of the infant nation. The people sleep. The cares and toils that vexed their lives have passed into oblivion. Silent alike the voice of sanction and derision. They aspired to serve. They brought their sacrifices, time, intellect and blood, and laid them on their country's altar, but as of old, some were without favor. The unerring hand of destiny chose what it would for warp and woof, and from the loom of years, the glorious fabric of our country's history is snatched by those who claim to embody the spirit of our modern day. They flaunt its gorgeous hues before the eyes of men, they strive to hide its dark and sombre parts from view.

Each day, each hour, some new, some strange, fantastic doctrine of reform is launched into the political arena of our nation. However strange that doctrine is, however false its principle, however absurd the claims advanced in its behalf, its champion never fails to seek in the brief annals of our Republic, some worthy precedent to give it weight and countenance. If this were done with equity and justice, and with a care that shows a vital knowledge of the case, all would be well. But, is this the course pursued by these reformers, these declared disciples of honest government, these bulwarks for the rights of man?

Filled with the spirit of conceit they cite their precedents. From the acts of our great heroes they select what suits their purpose best, and ignoring the man, the age, the cause which drew him forth, they make their application, they boast of what our fathers did. To isolate a single act or group of acts, to sever all the tissues that bound them—living—to the cause they loved, they served even to the icy jaws of death, is a crime against the sacred dust of our illustrious dead. Were this the measure of their deeds, I'd pause.

But with itching hands they seize the most devoted servants of the land. They strive to mar the character, circumscribe the worth, of those whose sense of honor, truth and wisdom, detects the folly of their plans. With their perverted precedents they gain the credence of the public mind, they lead it where they will. Friends this is no idle dream. In future days students of history now unborn will pause to name our present chief the leader of his age, while those who moved with pomp amid the ringing shouts of the thoughtless crowd will be remembered because they scoffed, abjured, and the realization of his ideal reposed the destiny of his nation, bent to its task. Only removed from men, in close communion with his God did he complain. In the bosom of the Eternal he sought with tears the love, the friendship which his fellow men denied. When at last the great heart of Lincoln, stilled by the assassin's bullet, was at peace, the people knew their folly. The influence of his life will last as long as human breath. Character can never be destroyed. The lofty peak of mountain range is ever bathed in sunshine however fierce the storms may rage around its slope, the noble character stands serene amid the basest persecutions. But, to see the sunlit peak, to gain the measure of an honest heart, demands an altitude that few attain, a height far above clouds or darkness, baseness or intrigue. To reach this lofty eminence, where every effort gleams resplendent in the clear light of truth may cost a life of toil, it must be the aim of those who would elevate the race.

But what relation does this bear toward our theme? Our land, our institutions of government are passing thru a crisis. This alone does not distinguish the age for crises have been met and passed before and each new victory launched us on a fairer sea. Danger lurks in our colossal fortunes. Wealth, like a giant octopus has put forth its inky tentacles and grasped whate'er of worth it found. Its baleful presence is felt and known in our legislative halls, it has robbed them of their honor, self respect, and sense of right.

From north to south, from east to west, the nation has been stirred to its very soul. Dishonesty and fraud, unearthed, have been denounced on every hand. Our public servants, however faithful, have not escaped the scathing censure of the crowd, crazed by its passion for reform. New ideas, new methods, new rights, each pledged to remedy the fault, remove the stain, each supported by a group of ardent followers, have entered the lists to strive for honor in the nations eyes. Columbia turns from all and heeds them not, a nobler knight than these must win her trust. Not theory but the intrinsic worth of any innovation must give it right to live.

Is this a prophecy? Let it be so. Charles Lee, Conway and their kind would long have been forgotten but that their cursed natures strove to vilify, defame, the most devoted servant of his day and cause. Our historic type of tenderness, love, devotion, did not escape the censure of the crowd. Even wearers of the sacerdotal robes, the so called feeders of the flock, painted him with horn and hoof. Deaths without number, crimes of every sort were imputed to his hand. His soul, assured that in Adams County, Ohio, has a story of its own, not in its vice, but in that its vice has been exposed. If the flaming brand of truth were flashed from shore to shore, until it would light the deepest recesses of each American voter's heart, revealing the motives, the aspirations of each, it would appall us all to see the ignorance, the vice, the civic crime, thus unveiled; and yet from the floor of our national senate comes the cry, "The people are honest, their representatives are corrupt." Shame on our voters if such a state exists. If this be true our form of government is doomed to fail. It is not true, honesty and corruption obtain in either class, cleanse the first, do not diminish or increase its powers or rank, and as sure as darkness flees from light, men of true worth will sit in the supreme councils of our land. The leader can accomplish nothing except those led consent. The people have the government they wish. The breath of summer moves the ripening grain, its force is felt to the field's remotest parts, so desire or dread, confidence or admiration, sweep through multitudes of men and shape the choice of each. Fill every heart with civic purity and pride, honest men will be in power, our nation's destiny will be secure.

Grant the powers of our deliberative assemblies to the mob, cast to the winds our system which approximates each citizen's desire, little will be gained, the last barrier of conservative progress will be swept away, and the government in the hands of honest people will be secure, yes secure, to be tossed about by every wind of fashionable doctrine. One brief night sufficed to change the glad Hosannas to a fierce demand for crucifixion. Human nature is ever much the same. Blind strength can destroy a Bastile in a single day. Night-falls, charred ruins marks the place where the mighty fortress stood, devastation enthroned among the dying embers gloats on a fallen empire. Blind strength can destroy, only brain directed forces can create.

Time in his rapid flight has paused full oft to record the boasted prowess of our state. The achievements of our arms gleam brilliantly before the nations of the world, the splendor of our peaceful triumphs eclipse them all. Every spot that ever dimmed the luster of our flag has been erased by blood. That flag has crossed the desert waste, the flood, and now, the symbol of liberty to all the earth, it stands entrenched where the beaming light of every clime may kiss its streaming folds. Shall it be ever so or shall the sun of some future day gleam on this banner as the emblem of a special class that cannot see beyond the narrow confines of their own desires?

Wealth without limit, poverty to the very verge of ruin will not suffice to mark the class of men in whom we should trust the destines of our empire. An honest heart should mark the man, an honest vote distinguish him from all the rest. 'Tis not more power our voters need, but, the pride, the knowledge and the will, the self respect to use aright that which they have. In that is our only safety, our only plea, in that the sun of our American Constitution, that star of hope to countless millions yet unborn, will continue to rise higher and higher.

To Higher Things

In the great drama of the world, empires have had their rise and fall. Nations have come up through great tribulation and are now basking in the power of their political supremacy. The Caesars, the Napoleons, the Washingtons, and Lincolns have all played their parts, in their respective turns, and have left the stage of action. Amidst all these shifting scenes walks the Macbeth with carnage in his wake, and thus the pages of history are spotted with precious drops of blood. In that Eastern Land, by Galilee, appears the torch that is destined to blaze the way until its ray shall penetrate the remotest corners of the world and signify the dawn of universal peace. But whilst all these mighty scenes are being enacted, while our eyes behold the awful pageantry, amidst the restless surging of the heaving billows of progress, shall we not say that beneath it all is the mighty force of a steadily rising tide? The world is rising to higher things.

This great trend of the world's events includes the birth and rise of our own grand nation, the United States of America. It, too, has passed through its epochs of rest and turbulence, harmony and discord, peace and war; epochs characterized by the peaceful flow of the inland river on its way to join the gulf; epochs in which the jagged rocks of civil feuds have rent it in twain, causing a wound which the passing years alone can heal. Each succeeding period of our national history has brought with it characters of greater or lesser renown. They, too, have left their impress on our national life and then, have been ushered from the scene. But, what can stay the wheels of progress? "Westward the course of empire takes its way." Can it be said with equal truth, that with the extension of our border line, has come a gradual rise in the nation's ideals? In spite of evils that do exist, I believe, that our grand old nation is rising to higher things.

But, in this onward course of human affairs, in the great movements of historic ages, in the crucial moment, was not the intrinsic worth of some individual or individuals at the basis of the result? For centuries we find all Europe observing the dictates of one man, down there in Rome, in the personage of the Pope; the same continent trembles at the footsteps of the conquering Napoleon; wherein would lie the value of American Independence, had it not been for the iron will and indomitable courage of a George Washington; and tell me, ye who love the union, what would be the story, if that true American, whose praises we love to sing, the savior of our country, Abraham Lincoln, had not been guiding the Ship of State during that terrible crisis?

We need not confine ourselves to these illustrious men whose fame is unquestioned. Rather let us think of the vast multitudes, who have served their God, their country, and their fellowmen, and have gone down into their graves, "unwept, unhonored, and unsung." Let us think of the rising generation that shall in a few short years shape the destiny of men and of nations. Moreover, let us think of ourselves. Have we realized in the past, are we realizing in the present, the value the Creator has attached to our creation? Are we realizing the purpose of the Master Mind? What hope does the future have to offer? Of what character are the ideals that serve as our beacon lights to guide us through the haze of that unknown future? Are we, as individuals, rising to higher things?

O. T. EHRHART '11

Embryonic in the youth of today are the soul, brain, and brawn of the men of tomorrow. Upon the nature of these three elements will depend the character of the youth; upon the character of the youth, in a marked degree, will depend the character of the man; and upon the character of the man hangs the destiny of society. My first plea, then, is for a strong foundation upon which to build the superstructure.

But, let us pause once more, and ask ourselves the fitting question, where stand we? Have we cast our lot with the frenzied crowd in its mad grapple for wealth and power, and are we bartering our souls at the mart of eternal sacrifice? Or do we number ourselves with those who worship at the shrine of mere pleasure located on the highway that leads to the sale of a birthright for a mess of pottage? Surely these are not the goals of our ambition. Ah no! There is a higher aim in life than "wine, or sleep, or praise." Who would dare to own these as the Mecca of his hopes? They are as false gods luring their victims on to a fatal destiny. In our firmament, there is a star of greater magnitude, to which we may attach the chariot that is bearing us above the sensual strata of human society. And then you ask, "What is that star?" Is it not the star that leads to the realization of self? "The unfolding of all human capacities in conformity with the demands of the natural and human environment." The accomplishment of such an end necessitates the trampling under foot all that is low and base either in desire, design, or deed. It is not the strife for that which is ignoble, but a mighty conflict in which the nobler will ascends the throne and is the dictator of only that which is noble, good, and true.

Methinks I hear a voice saying, "We are living in a practical age, the ideal will not suffice, life is real, we must not soar beyond the grasp of human achievement." In answer I say, who will dare to rob the sculptor of the image of his mind, the incorporation of which, is not entirely possible because of material limitations? Will we throw up our hands and cease the pursuit of that which may seem to be in the realm of the unattainable and yet that which is leading us onward toward the goal of ultimate perfection? May we not say with Cassius that the fault is not in our stars but in ourselves, if we be underlings.

Are we agreed thus far, in this great problem of human life; that youth is the golden hour in which to foster or subdue the ancestral tendency that every life should be one of noble purpose; and that the great end is the unfolding of the self; if so, then are we ready to bend our whole being toward the accomplishment of the task.

Given that being richly endowed with capacity, and a lofty aim, and the end is not yet. The time has come when the pilot assumes control. What is that pilot? The will, strong and resolute, that is the pilot. It can steer the bark safely by the iceberg of materialism, through the rocky reefs of fame, over the whirlpool of pleasure, into the haven of success; or it can wreck it beyond repair, yea, set it adrift on the vast expanse of blasted hopes or unrealized ambitions, only to sink in the great sea of the unknown.

But, whilst I stand wrapped in contemplation of that which is yet to be, I catch a gleam coming from yonder heights; it is only a gleam, yet to me it betokens an untold vision. My heart throbs within me; my soul longs for a fuller realization of that vision of which only a ray has penetrated its way to me. But, by what course shall my feet be guided? That is the problem. But stay, the light grows brighter, hope increases, my eyes behold a rugged path. If I can but stand on yonder summit, I shall be "Monarch of all I survey."

I start to scale the rocky slope. There are other paths but only one path for me. It is rugged and steep but I must make the most of it. Could I but rid myself of this heavy burden wrought in the generations past and handed to me as my inheritance from my forefathers, I might with greater ease attain the goal. Yea, but did not my heritage also include that which is above price, the elements that make for success? Do I not claim a will enthroned, and do I not read that "men at some times are masters of their fate?" Verily so, upward is my course. I slay the brutish instinct. I am one step higher. I am rising by things that are beneath my feet, and ever as I rise my vision grows, and now a new revelation has come to me. I am not alone. My fellowman is my side. He is on the same highway and I cannot escape his influence nor my responsibility for his welfare. Together we share the struggle. It must needs be so, if life is to be realized in all its fullness.

Upward then we go, not with a single bound, but step by step, while the passing years roll on, ever obeying the nobler impulse, until we stand wrapped in that sublime atmosphere and view with unmixed joy the grandeur of our promised land. Standing thus enraptured, through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings:

Build thee more stately mansions,
O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last.
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free, Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

Civic Righteousness

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people," said a man who, for the asking, was given an understanding heart that he might be able to discern between good and bad.

Just as any chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so any nation is no stronger to perpetuate itself than its sins render it. As surely as the individual must suffer the consequences of his sin, so surely must nations suffer for the sins which they harbor in their national lives. If Dr. Sheldon is correct in saying that "a nation has no more right to seek anything first, except the kingdom of righteousness, than the individual has," then, the statement, just made, will stand.

Among civilized peoples the sense of right is a highly developed characteristic, and this sense becomes an art, for right is only right when done. As Fichte says, "Not merely to know, but according to thy knowledge to do, is thy vocation;" then, knowing only what is right, and never doing it, can, in no manner nor

We speak of righteousness as disseminated by religion—that phase of righteousness which is principally established thru the agency of the church, which teaches and emphasizes, more than any other institution, the right relation between God and man. Then again, we speak of social righteousness as pertaining to the domestic, industrial, economic and re-creative relations and activities of mankind. We find social righteousness to be no more nor less than the sense of right possessed by the social organism, representing the sum total of the ethical standards of the individrighteousness; they seem to think that it is conceived only in legislative halls, born in executive sanction, and nurtured in judicial jurisprudence. I heartily agree that the personnel moving in this sphere of civic action should be especially blest with an eye single to civic righteousness, but I hold also that if you and I wait in stupid inertia for judges, executors, and legislators to bring about a civic elysium, we shall be abundantly disappointed. Civic righteousness, like charity, begins at home. We, the people, should have a clearly-defined sense of it, and insist that it be established. Let us not be deluded with the idea that it is a golden orb, which, like the sun, shall in the sweet by and by rise, regardless of our will and action, and shine upon our beloved land with great splendor. It dare not be regarded as a distant and foreign condition, arising from a mysterious somewhere, and coming to us like the dawn of a beautiful day. It must have its inception not distant from our own hearths and firesides.

Civic righteousness demands that legislators legislate; that law-making bodies facilitate proper legislative action rather than retard or impede it. This time killing and "nothing doing" policy of some pronounced civic bodies, when the time is ripe for action, becomes a thoroughly disgusting farce to every true American, and stands in strange contrast to the dominant spirit of the day. Witness, if you please, the filibustering policy of the minority party in Congress; withdrawing or remaining away from sessions when important measures ought to go thru; the deliberately wilful delay of action, until, as in the case of the recent reciprocity agreement with Canada, the President had to come out with the big stick ultimatum "Ratification, or extra session" to learn the reason why the agreement was objectionable.

Once more, civic righteousness rises in holy indignation and declares that something must be done toward effecting a uniform divorce law. Now some, perhaps, are saying inaudibly, "Stop! you are interpolating the function of social righteousness for civic righteousness." I thank you, and would admit to be standing corrected, duals which constitute that organism. That sum total is the result obtained by the individual additions to and subtractions from social righteousness by the great mass of humanity. Another important phase of righteousness affecting the welfare of mankind is civic righteousness as pertaining to the civic life of the nation. It is upon this phase that we wish to devote our attention briefly.

Civic righteousness implies much; it yields good government; it stands for justice to all, and clean polities; caters not to mean, petty politicians; and finds good men and women to direct the civic affairs of the nation.

But some people have a peculiar notion as to what constitutes civic but for the fact that I need but to remind you that the civil power of some of the states in the Union has for some years past discreditably discharged its duties toward the American homes; that while in a way it is guarding the entrance to the sanctum of matrimony, at the same time it is holding wide open a back door of exit thru the nefarious divorce system. Again, I call upon you to witness the testimony of a Washington lady who, being about to marry, was importuned by well-wishing friends not to become a party to that particular marriage contract which was considered by them exit from the sanctum within which stands the hymeneal altar, swing too easily on their hinges due to too frequent usage. Attorneys who figure before the courts tell us that divorce is the safety-valve for unhappy homes, but some one has facetiously remarked that it has developed into a festering disease; while divorce may be termed the surgery for the ills of marriage, the conclusion is justifiable that the first operations were so deplorably unsuccessful that they developed into a running sore. What was first intended to relieve only radical marriage incongruities now has become a common county, let us beware lest we are of those of whom Carlyle speaks when he says "To the vulgar few things are wonderful that are not distant." What may be wonderfully scandalous at a distance may happen to be near at hand and become reprehensible at home, for all who quaked when the Vote-selling Exposition began were by no means in Adams county exclusively.

Dr. Reed, president of Dickinson College, branded vote-selling as "the most dastardly crime against the commonwealth."

As remarked before, civic righteousness must have its birth in the hearts to be grossly incompatible, to all of which importunities she finally replied: "Well, if I do marry and find it was a mistake, can't I get a divorce?" A St. Louis chaffeur asked for a divorce from his wife on the ground that his wedding was only a lark. If divorces are to be granted on that sort of plea, all the courts of the land will not be able to attend to all the business they will have on hand. You and I can barely imagine, much less ever determine, how strong is the undercurrent of that sentiment among marriageable people, just because the back doors of practice. The greater tolerance, we, the people give to the divorce habit, the more we are undermining the stability of moral character and of the home. When these two fail, we can't hope to have a government worth living under, or a nation that has within itself the power of its perpetuation.

That voters, as citizens of the United States shall preserve inviolate and regard as sacredly personal the prerogative to vote is demanded by the principles of civic righteousness. While we look away to distant Adams and minds of the American citizenship. Yet it remains, however, a fact that there is little or no credit due our representative bodies which require such overwhelming pressure from their constituencies to move them to act favorably on issues which they already know lie close to the hearts of well-thinking people. Such dilatoriness can only be understood to mean that in many cases our civil representatives are, so far as moral issues are concerned at least, in the same category with the man who when he was taken to task for not supporting a certain moral issue, replied, "I'm no moralist, I'm a politician." When promising young lawyers who become inveigled in swindling scandals are found out, and are told that their actions are contrary to right principles, flipantly declare that "The world does not run on principles," it is high time that we carefully avoid making such the custodians of our civil rights.

For civic righteousness to triumph in our nation, it is imperative that the franchised citizenship makes an intelligent study of her civic life, and assumes an earnest interest in her political welfare. Says Samuel Capen, one of the foremost citizens of Massachusetts: "I am more concerned over the percentage of citizens who have a vote, but do not use it, than I am for all for which the red flag of anarchy stands." To say that the majority of voters are cursed with the disposition of the political corruptionist is hardly permissible; hence, it follows, that if each voter who has a good sense of right, at the right time and every time, would do his political duty, civic righteousness would rapidly gain ground and have the esteem of all honorable citizens.

Let us remember then that the individual who would hinder proper legislation, who would sell his vote, who would be indifferent to wholesome, moral issues, who would dare to attempt to vitiate the sanctity of the marriage bond, or dare to endorse walks of life. A proper civic condition can come only thru every one's payment of special attention to their own duties.

PROF. J. H. ALLEMAN '02 RE-ELECTED SUPERINTENDENT OF DUBOIS' SCHOOLS

The Dubois, Pa., Daily Express of Wednesday makes the following mention of the re-election of its school superintendent, Dr. J. H. Alleman, formerly of this city:

At a meeting of the DuBois school board last evening, City Superintendent Dr. J. H. Alleman was unanimously chosen as the head of the DuBois schools for the succeeding term of three years. His salary was increased to $2,400, this increase being a recognition of the fine work and administrative ability shown by him during the past twelve years.

Dr. Alleman did not solicit the vote of a single member of the board nor did he ask for an increase, but the vote was unanimous and the increase was made voluntarily and without opposition, as it is recognized that Dr. Alleman has done untold good for the public school system of DuBois.

He has labored earnestly for its upbuilding, and has raised the standard to a high degree. He is recognized throughout the State as an educator of great ability, and this year he had requests to make application in other cities, but he believes that the opportunities for work here are exceptional and preferred to remain.

Steelton Here Saturday

After the good showing of our team here last Friday we feel sure of another victory over the boys from the steel town. Nearly all the games from now until the end of the season will be on the home grounds, and with good loyal support there is no reason why L. V. should not pile up more victories. If you are loyal to the White and Blue you'll come out and howl Saturday. L. V. expects every man (which embraces woman) to do his duty and then some.

kindred civic vices, must ever be listed in the category of "undesirable citizens," since he is an avowed enemy of civic righteousness, for it is that that exalts a nation, but civic unrighteousness is a reproach to any people.

Lecture

The Saint Stephen's Sunday School class of the local U. B. church, in an effort to raise a pledge for the new church fund, presented Prof. Shenk in his lecture entitled, "Thou Art the Man" on Monday evening in the college chapel, to an appreciative audience.

The Professor paid his tribute to all systems of reform which as it were strive to brush back the waves of crime after they have become violent and unmanageable instead of striking at the very bottom of the evil by removing the cause of crime. Evils can not be legislated out of existence, by any body of lawmakers, they must be removed by an intelligent franchise. The modern fads such as the recall and short ballot are only a means to cover the issues of deeper significance. They all point backward to the primitive assemblies of Greece and Rome.

An earnest appeal was made to the youth of the day for purity in all the

Delaware 8-5

In a loosely played game L. V. beat Delaware by the score of 8-5. Raughley pitched excellent ball but the poor support behind him was mainly responsible for most of the runs. Little did not have to exert himself at any time during the game. He had eight strike outs to his credit. One of the features of the game was Lehman's homer in the fifth with one on base. Carmany and Lyter played a nice game in the field. Our boys showed a decided improvement in their hitting in Friday's game. Out of the seven hits, there was one homer and three two baggers.

The score by innings:

First inning. Ward struck out. Dunn singled to center, stole second, out on throw from Lehman to Miller.

Marshall singled, out at second Lehman to Carmany.

Miller singled, reached third, out Marshall to Huston. Hummel out flied to Huston. Smith smashed out a two bagger. Harnish out, Raughley to Hoke.

Second inning. Hoke struck out. Joss flew out to Lyter. Harvey hit a single, reached second. Knopf out, Smith to Lehman.

Lehman out, Raughley to Hoke. Lyter reached first on an error. Loser reached first on an error. Lyter and Loser score on Carmany's two bagger. Little singled scoring Carmany. Miller reached first on an error, Hummel flew out to Marshall. Little and Miller scored on Smith's double. Harnish out Harvey to Hoke.

Third inning. Houston out Carmany to Hoke. Raughley struck out. Ward struck out.

Lehman out Dunn to Hoke. Lyter out Harvey to Hoke. Loser struck out.

Fourth inning. Dunn flew out to Lyter, Marshall singled, Hoke singled scoring Marshall. Joss flew out to Carmany, Harvey out, to Loser.

Carmany reached first on an error. Little flew out to Harvey. Miller walked. Hummel out Harvey to Lehman. Carmany scored. Smith flew out to Marshall.

Fifth inning. Knopf walked,

Huston flew out to Little Raughley singled. Ward and Little to Lehman Dunn reached first on passed ball. Knopf and Raughley scored. Marshall to left field and reached third on Hummel's error. Dunn scored. Hoke struck out.

Harnish singled. Lehman hit a homer to deep center scoring Harnish. Lyter flew out to Knopf. Loser out to Hoke. Carmany struck out.

Sixth inning. Joss flew out to Loser. Harvey out, Smith to Lehman. Knopf singled. Huston flew out to Carmany.

Little out, Raughley to Hoke. Miller reached first on error. Hummel reached first on error. Smith out. Raughley to Hoke. Harnish out, to Hoke.

Seventh inning. Raughley struck out. Ward walked. Dunn flew out to Harnish. Marshall struck out.

Lehman out trying stretch single into a two bagger Hoke to Dunn. Lyter, out stealing Houston to Dunn. Loser flew out to Dunn.

Eighth inning. Hoke struck out. Joss singled. Harvey hit to Smith. Joss and Harvey out Smith to Carmany to Lehman.

Carmany struck out. Little flew out to catcher Miller out Harvey to Hoke.

Ninth inning. Knopf flew out to Carmany. Huston got a pass, stole second and scored on wards out Little to Lehman Dunn flew out to Hummel.

The important feature of the game was the long drive by Lehman. The pitcher sent the ball to the right place and Lehman landed upon it making one of the longest drives ever seen upon our field.

Senior Oratory Recitals

Two of the seniors of the Department of Oratory, will give their recitals next week in Engle Hall. Miss Verda A. Snyder, on Tuesday evening, May 16, and Mrs. Nona Downey Hockenbury, on Thursday evening, May 18.

Miss Snyder has made an attractive arrangement of "The Christmas Carol," by Charles Dickens. She will be assisted by Mr. Kimmel, basso, and Mr. Light, violinist, of Lebanon. Miss Snyder has been working faithfully under the direction of Miss Adams and we can be assured the recital will be a thoroughly enjoyable one. Her impersonation of Scrooge, the ghosts, and other characters of Dickens' story, is excellent and discriminating. Mrs. Hockenbury will read her cutting of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," by Kate Douglass Wiggin.

Rev. E. S. Bowman Goes to Philadelphia

The Rev. Dr. Edward S. Bowman, formerly of Dayton, O., preached his inaugural sermon yesterday as pastor of the Emmanuel Presbyterian Church, West Philadelphia. He succeeds the Rev. David Garrett Smith, who organized the congregation nearly 11 years ago.

Doctor Bowman is a popular minister, and was wanted by a large portion of the congregation of Bethany Church to fill that pulpit. He is a graduate of Lebanon Valley College, and was pastor of the United Brethren Church, in Harrisburg, for nine years. He left the United Brethren Church and took a post-graduate course in the Princeton Theological Seminary. For the past 19 months he has been pastor of the Oak Street Presbyterian Church in Dayton. During his ministry the church received 82 new members. Rev. Bowman was a member of the class of '90.

L. V. Academy Beats Lebanon High

The Academy boys surprised the Lebanon High School team when they defeated them on their own ground on Tuesday by a score 9 to 1. Although the grounds were in no condition whatever to play, our boys played through the game without an error. In the first inning the Academy scored three runs, the other six runs were scattered through the remaining innings. The Academy has three more games with Lebanon High, two will be played on our home field May 16th and May 30th A. m.

Score:

L. V. A. 9. Lebanon High 1.

Preps vs. Albright Reserves

Albright Reserves journeyed to Annville on Saturday morning where they met the strong L. V. Academy team. The game resulted in a victory for the Reserves by the score of 11-8. In the seventh inning the Academy started a batting rally. When the smoke of battle had cleared away six runs were marked to their credit. In the eighth two more runs were scored by the Academy. The game was marred by many errors. Light pitched winning ball, his opponents having but six hits while he had fourteen strikeouts to his credit. The score:

Faculty Musicians

Profs. Lehman, Schroyer, and Long journeyed to Lemberger's and Mt. Nebo with Rev. A. S. Beckley, Sunday when rally day for Lebanon Valley College was observed. The quartette furnished the music for the occasion, with Prof. Schroyer directing, while Prof. Lehman lead the congregational music.

Freshmen vs. Annville High

The Freshmen received a close call at the hands of the Annville High School on Monday night on the athletic field. During the first inning the Freshmen got six runs and then the boys blanked them with the score 11-6 until the seventh when the Freshies braced up and captured a half dozen more making the score 12:11. This was a game conspicuous for its errors.

The regular missionary joint session was held on the campus. The three phases of a missionary's life were discussed. Florence Clippinger, the leader, described what their physical conditions should be and also the physical work they were expected to do. Mr. Richie spoke of the intellectual side. It is our duty to share our learning with those of the darker continents. Mr. Leibold spoke of their great spiritual power. The program proved one of the most interesting of the year.

Prep. Chicken and Noodle Supper

The Academy in an effort to raise necessary funds for the baseball season, gave a chicken and noodle supper in the old Academy building on Saturday night. The supper was financially a success. They were well patronized by the good people of the town and disposed of all of their supplies.

L. V. vs. Steelton

In a one sided game on Saturday the blue and white easily defeated Steelton Y. M. C. A. by the score 27-1. L. V. garnered a total of eighteen hits from the visiting pitchers, including four three baggers and three doubles. Lehman had four long hits to his credit. Little had two of the four three baggers.

Hughes for the visitors was wild. He hit three men and walked three. Fifteen of the hits were gathered from his delivery in six and one-third innings. Irvin held L. V. to three hits in two and two-third innings. Little for the home team did not have to exert himself and only pitched five curved balls through the entire game. In the fifth inning he retired the side on three thrown balls. He received great support. Dunlap, who played for the visitors scored their only run. The game was but a good illustration of "drei-socker." There was nothing to it but going to bat and then running around the bases. The score:

Editorial

The base ball season so far at Lebanon Valley has been a decided success. The team has lost only three games out of the seven played, and the scores in those games were creditable ones. We admit that the number of games on our schedule are scanty, but the student body, in the main, is to be blamed for this deficiency. Can the manager schedule a heavy season when he lacks the funds with which to back it? This lack is due to a large number of the students not doing their part, namely, paying their athletic dues. If each student would do his part we could have two games each week and have as many home games as visiting games. The home games are the ones that bring out college spirit and enthusiasm. Smaller colleges than ours can have a full and successful schedule and there is no reason why we cannot. May those who have not done their little part, "feel their nerve," and "get wise."

Lebanon Valley has excellent material for a base ball team and had she a coach to develop the same, we are sure that it would be able to go against any college team and come back with a victory to its credit. There are many fellows here who could be developed into professional players but there is no person present who is able to instruct them. Again we can point to those smaller colleges and look with shame at our own. Come let us all assist in the base ball season at Lebanon Valley.

The work of the Womans' Board of Lebanon Valley College is doing excellent work. The campus is being brought into fine shape through their efforts. The rough places are being smoothed and bare places covered with a soft green coat of grass. Through their efforts the superintendent of grounds and buildings is at work daily keeping the walks in condition and the grass and dandelions from becoming too tall. All the stones and debris have been cleared from the lawn to such an extent that it is beginning to rival the most beautiful lawn of some artistic home.

The work of the new senior-junior Council must not be over looked. Before they took charge of affairs around the boys' dormitory this spring, the hallways and closets were filled with refuse to such an extent that it was difficult to make one's way to his room. Now things have changed. The halls and rooms are cleared with the utmost care and every thing is as clean as a newly built house not yet occupied. This one instance goes to prove that the best and only method of governing around Lebanon Valley is that of the student government.

With the hearty cooperation of the faculty, the student government will be a great success and much of the trouble will be eradicated. May the improvement continue and be carried into the on-coming year.

Turn on the Light

The following editorial which appeared in the March number of the Hiram "Advance" appeals to us as displaying the true college spirit.

"There has always been a plea advanced that nothing should be published in the college paper that might show outsiders things were not all right in Hiram. If an article were published condemning rabid society spirit, a howl has been raised that the outside ought not know such things. If we 'got after' delinquent officers it was 'poor taste; 'twill hurt the college.' Now we realize quite clearly that the Advance is not read by the whole nation. We know it is not read entirely by many students. Indeed there are few outside of Hiram who do more than glance through it. This constant fear that something in it will 'hurt us outside' has little foundation. If anyone does happen to read such an article, instead of saying, 'there's a poor college,' he says, 'there's a college paper that is trying to influence student life for good.' If we have published things that hurt, it has been with the constant aim that conditions in Hiram college might be bettered. It is our opinion that such a purpose should be one of the chief ends of the Advance. We hope that whenever publicity will do good, the light will be turned on." —Exchange

Y. M. C. A.

The meeting Sunday afternoon was led by Warren B. Hayes. His subject, "The Limitations of Life" was well discussed after which there was a general discussion. The substance of the remarks may be summed up in part in "Every man in his life time needs to thank his faults" and limitations.

There will be a special business session of the Y. M. C. A., Wednesday May 17 at 12:30 prompt. The question for decision is the all-important one concerning summer-conferences and our delegation there. We are especially urged to send delegates to Pocono Pines this summer. We are assured that Pocono will be on a par with Northfield and has the advantage of being less distant. This conference lasts from June 14 to 22nd.

Senior Recital

The second Pianoforte Recital was given by Miss Ruth Christina Detweiler in Engle Auditorium, Thursday, May 11, 1911 at 8 p. m. She was very ably assisted by Misses Grace Naomi Smith and Edna E. Yarkers both members of the Oratory department. Miss Detweiler rendered her selections on the piano in a very excellent manner before an appreciative audience. She was presented a large number of carnations and roses by her many friends. She showed, in her recital, some of the splendid work that is being done by the department of Music.

L. V. Academy vs. Reading High School

L. V. Academy journeyed to Reading on Friday where they met defeat at the hands of the strong Reading High team to the tune of 6-1. Reading won by superior all-around playing and daring base running. The Preps showed the lack of practice in their team work. They out-hit the boys from the pretzel town but could not hit when hits meant runs. The score:

Lebanon Valley De- feats Millersville

ADMINISTERS FIRST DEFEAT IN SEVERAL YEARS

The strong Millersville State Normal School ball tossers arrived here on Saturday morning with every expectation of running away with a victory over Lebanon Valley. But lo! imagine their surprise and mortification, when they discovered the score to be 9-1 in L. V.'s favor after the dust of battle had cleared away. This is the first time in four games that we scored on Millersville, which makes the victory more brilliant.

L. V. was right there with the stick and got hits when they meant runs. Lehman got in another of his "drei-sockers" in the fifth inning. Loser and Carmany starred at bat. Lehman and Lyter played a great fielding game. Lehman speared several line drives, for one of which he had to send in a "hurry-up" call for his aeroplane in order to reach it. Loser covered a lot of ground in center and made several pretty catches. Little pitched tip-top ball, only passing one man and allowing four hits. He struck out seven of the down-state sluggers. Not satisfied with this the 110-pound prince of the mound added two healthy swats to his credit.

Weller was not in his usual good form and was relieved in the fifth by Skiles, who was unable to stop the hits and the score began to roll up faster than ever. During his short stay in the box Weller hit one, gave two passes to first base, and was found for six hits. Skiles passed one and was also found for a like number of hits.

The game was exciting to the finish and good support was given to all the

The Close at Hand

There remain less than two weeks of our college year plus the events of commencement week. That means that this is the last week before "finals" begin in earnest. The year is rapidly drawing to a close and in this race, as well as others, much depends upon the finish. We cannot count the year an unqualified success unless we end up the year's work as brilliantly as we began it last September. We realize that the time of year is likewise at hand when work seems to be an unnecessary burden and when our inclinations would lead us out under the shade of the trees there to repose in quiet comfort. Social matters are also present to make an extra demand upon our time. But let us not forget entirely that campus work does not give us the kind of credit that we desire at this season. Our social demands can be postponed in anticipation of the coming vacation, and with a little extra effort we can endure the tremendous heat which the weather man is seeing fit to shower upon us.

This is our last week for actual class work and for refreshing our memories with the knowledge that we have already forgotten but which we must needs know when the Profs. have their say. Let this remind you that next week you will be called upon to account for your year's work. No matter what you have done throughout the year, whether you have studied or not, now is the time to hustle around and make the finish commensurate with your ability. Let not the result be less than your best.

The Seniors, no doubt, have almost completed their last "quizzes" and will soon leave the college for good. Their days are few and doubtless they will need the intervening time to rest from their arduous labors, preparatory to their final exercises.

Regular examinations will be held next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The faculty, no doubt, have realized the needs of some for a little more "cramming" and have decided to give us Monday and Tuesday to do it. But Tuesday is a holiday which we may have to celebrate. Then for the exams. Let each try to do himself justice and complete the year to his own and his Professors' satisfaction.

Tennis Tournament at Annville

LEBANON VALLEY TENNIS LEAGUE HERSHY VERSUS ANNVILLE

The Annville team of the Lebanon Valley Tennis League opened the season at home with Hershey and defeated them in both doubles and singles.

For the home team Ellis and Saylor defeated Marquet and Graeff, of Hershey. Score 6-1, 6-2. In singles Kreider defeated Groeff, of Hershey by the score of 5-7, 6-1, 6-0. This was the first of twenty tournaments to be played by the Annville team this summer. Ten of these are to be played at home.

There are six teams, Hershey, Myerstown, Hummelstown, Lebanon, Sinking Springs, and Annville, represented in the League. The North American has presented a cup to be given as a trophy to the winner.

Next Saturday, May 27, Annville plays Sinking Springs at home and the boys hope for a victory.

The Annville team is almost entirely composed of Lebanon Valley students and the boys play their games on the college courts.

L. V. Academy 9 vs Lebanon High 0

The Academy clearly showed its superiority over the Lebanon High School team by defeating them 9 to 0. The Academy boys played together from the start and the way they hit the ball made it necessary for Lebanon High to put a second pitcher in the box. This is the third game with Lebanon High and the boys are confident of winning three out of four games. The score:

Seven Millersvillian split the air, only one got an excursion to first and a quadruple accidentally "put them where they ain't."

The varsity showed us the best game for three years.

This is but a promise of what they'll do if the student body gives them the support they deserve.

Don't root when they win and squeal when they lose unless you are anxious to reveal your natural traits.

On Sunday afternoon the Y. W. C. A. completed the study of the life of Alice Freeman Palmer. Miss Clippinger led the meeting and discussed the last years of Mrs. Palmer's life and her death.

The study of this noble woman's career has been an inspiration to the association girls. Mrs. Palmer is a splendid example of one who has surmounted the greatest difficulties and raised herself to a position where she could lead a life of the most usefulness. Her life was a beautiful one of service for others.

Baseball--Alumni Varsity

We notice that manager Brunner has scheduled a game between the varsity and the Alumni on Wednesday, June 7. This game is intended to arouse the interest in the college amongst its graduates which we so much need. Manager Brunner has a splendid team upon the field this season and he is prepared to "trim" those who have gone before now, "Grads," be up and doing, and be on hand during commencement week and bring the best team you have and make this the best game of the season abounding in enthusiasm and interest in your Alma Mater.

Y. M. C. A.

The meeting Sunday afternoon was addressed by P. R. Koontz. He spoke upon the subject "Vacation," scripture lesson taken from Phillipians 4. The leader gave us an excellent talk upon the obligations of Christian Work during the vacation season.

The Senior Oratory Recitals

The Senior Oratory Recitals which were given last week were both of a very high order, showing not only thorough, painstaking preparation for these particular events, but conscientious, well-directed work during the course, and marked ability on the part of the readers. Both performances were most heartily received and thoroughly enjoyed by the full house which greeted each. The long and difficult programs were presented without a break to mar them.

Miss Verda Snyder's reading of Dickens' story, "The Christmas Carol," was thoroughly enjoyed. Her impersonation of Scrooge and the different characters showed discrimination and versatility. She was assisted by Mr. Charles Kimmel, Basso, and Mr. Fred Light, Violinist, both of Lebanon.

Mrs. Hockenbury's reading of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," by Kate Douglas Wiggin, was also enjoyed by all. She presented Rebecca with great sweetness and all the characters in the development of the story were well suggested. She held the audience with ease.

Miss Estelle Butler, Contralto, of Carlisle, a former class-mate assisted her with three songs; Miss Meda Diehm accompanist.

These were the last of the recitals given by the department, Mr. Ischy's recital of "Seven Oaks" preceding.

It was evident to all who attended these recitals that Miss Adams' work as teacher of Oratory is bringing splendid results, for much of the success of these performances was due to the superior instruction which she is imparting to her classes.

ALUMNI NOTES

Rev. A. A. Long, D. D., Pastor of First Church, Altoona, was toastmaster at the Banquet of the Alumni of Bonebrake Theological Seminary two weeks ago.

President W. G. Clippinger, '99, delivered the address to the graduates of Bonebrake Theological Seminary.

President B. F. Daugherty of Westfield College, attended a meeting of the Board of Education in Dayton, Ohio.

John R. Geyer, '98, of Harrisburg, visited friends here on Wednesday.

Volume II.

Annville, Pa., Tuesday, May 30, 1911

No. 34

Entered as second-class matter November 12, 1910, at the post office at Annville, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

L. V. 3--Albright 4

In one of the most exciting games of the season Albright defeated Lebanon Valley by the score of 4-3.

It was a pitchers battle supreme. Albright by taking advantage of our loose playing in the first two innings scored three of their four runs.

After the second inning the up-holders of the blue and white settled down and showed the grand stand seven innings of real base ball, the like of which hadn't been seen on our athletic field for many moons. For the first six innings Weaver held Lebanon Valley hitless and retired the boys in one, two, three fashion. In the seventh inning we got our first hit, but could not make it count.

In the ninth Dunlap opened up by getting to first on Hindel's error. Miller was next up and smashed out a two bagger, scoring Dunlap from first. The wiry little Irishman gained the plate by a pretty slide. Lyter grounded to pitcher and was safe at first when Miller was caught at third. Lehman was next up smashed out a pretty triple scoring Lyter. Harnish scored Lehman by an infield hit. Smith flew out to Kelchner. Loser struck out.

The fielding was good. Lyter showed a pretty piece of headwork when he held a man on third and threw the runner out at first by fielding a slow bunt. Dunlap made a sensational catch of a line drive in the eighth.

Foltz the first man up for Albright obtained a free pass to first: was advanced to second by Kerner's out. Smoyer singled. Foltz scored on a passed ball. Kelchner flew out to Lehman. In the second Shuman singled and scored on Weaver's and Yost's outs. Zerbe singled and scored on Hummel's triple. Foltz ended the inning by flying out to Young.

Albright scored their fourth run in the fourth, Shuman drew a pass. Weaver got to first on an error. Yost struck out. Zerbe scored Shuman when he was safe on first by an error. The score:

The time has come when our editorial duties for the year are almost over. The last number of the "News" will be issued several days late in order that all the Commencement news can be secured. The New Chapel

The new Chapel? Well, the Alumni of Lebanon Valley College that come back for commencement this year will think it is a new chapel. It has been noticed of late that this particular part of the college possessions was some-what out of harmony with the general surroundings, and had a tendency to dispel the good impressions which the group of handsome college buildings and the beautiful campus created. It is particularly important that this auditorium should make an attractive appearance, for here practically all the public performances of the school year are given, and strangers attending these events naturally form their opinion of the college from the impressions which they receive of Engle Conservatory. The Woman's Board which has been doing so much to improve conditions about the college has been devoting all its energies to the improvements to the campus, undertaken last year. Consequently they could not take up this matter as they would, undoubtedly, otherwise have done. Not only was the atmosphere of the place "out of harmony" but every time there was any occasion for decorating the hall, the committee in charge must needs spend a tremendous amount of time and energy in overcoming the difficulties which the peculiar arrangement of the hall presented.

Now all this will be obviated. Some time ago an entertainment was given under the direction of Professors Adams and Sheldon, to raise funds in order to purchase window shades, etc., for the chapel. These funds were turned over to the Woman's Board, and it was found that after the desired purchase had been made there still remained a balance of almost twenty-five dollars in the treasury. Now it seems that it is against the constitution and by-laws of this organization to have any money lying idle on their hands when it might be invested to good advantage in needed improvements. So with this small amount a a nest -egg, they began to plan some improvements to the chapel which would be permanent, and upon receiving a promise of co-operation from Miss Adam proceeded at once to carry their plan into effect. Miss Adams drew the plans of the arches to be erected, and submitted them to Mrs. Keister who is president of the Woman's Board. The plans were approved and the arches are already well under way toward completion. The net proceeds realized from the "Oratory Dramatics," to be given under Miss Adams' direction on^{the} evening of June seventh, will be contributed to this fund, and it is hoped will almost, if not entirely, pay off all debts incurred in making these improvements.

As before stated this will mean a great change in the appearance of the chapel. Not only will it make the place more beautiful and make it more suitable for holding the many public exercises incident to college work, but we believe the beautifying of the chapel will have a tendency to produce a spirit of greater reverence, on the part of the students at the daily chapel exercises. And when once the walls have been beautified with appropriate paintings, which no doubt the different classes and organizations of the college will in time provide, we shall have a chapel whose appearance will be a credit to the institution of which it is a part.

In the mean time it should be remembered that it is largely due to the efforts of Miss Adams that these improvements have been made possible. Not only was it largely thru her influence that the Woman's Board undertook the work, but she is now devoting every minute of available time to training the participants in the "Oratory Dramatics." The oratory students will also be assisted on this occasion by the music students, and it is confidently expected that this will be the greatest success of the school year.

Prof. H. H. Baish, '00 Re-elected Supt. Altoona Schools

By an unanimous vote of the Altoona school board yesterday afternoon the present superintendent of schools, Prof. Henry H. Baish, was re-elected to another term of three years at the same salary, $2,400 per year. By actual time the calling of the roll and the election of the superintendent took exactly one minute and ten seconds.

The election of Superintendent Baish as head of the city schools for another term marks an epoch in the life of a man whose rise in educational lines has been rapid. About sixteen years ago, he began his teaching career in this city as one of the instructors in the city schools. Soon afterwards he left the city and completed a course at the Cumberland Valley State Normal school and returned to Altoona for four years. He then completed a classical course at the Lebanon Valley college, and returned to this city for another teaching period of seven years. He served as instructor here in 1908, when he was elected to the position of superintendent of the Altoona schools.

Commenting on the above report, I would say I wrote to a considerable number of the alumni for help in this matter. A number, interested in other matters concerning the college, were not asked to help in this. In only one case did I receive a reply abruptly refusing aid. This was from a man who benefited greatly from the college in his student days. In many cases I received no replies at all.

It is a curious commentary that a number of the men who made the most noise about athletics, in their student days, did not as much as answer the letters sent them appealing for money.

In talking to a number of the alumni concerning the athletic situation, it was the consensus of opinion that the best results could be obtained by having a combined board, composed of alumni, faculty and student members in control of all athletics in the college, with power to displace either captains or managers should the occasion, in the mind of such a board, demand. With such a board in control, money would not be spent recklessly, and no man would keep a place on any team, except he earned the place by working for it.

It would seem that first things ought to come first, and that the first thing any college administration ought to be concerned with would be the general financial and scholarly advancement of a college rather than the reckless expenditure of constituents money on athletics or any other lesser branch of college activity. Lebanon Valley has suffered too much from the latter policy, in the past.

The base ball team this year is composed of college students, and not professional athletes. Nothing but good words can be said of the excellent work the team has done this spring.

Senior Recital by Miss Edith Gingrich

The third of the recitals given by the graduating class in music was given Tuesday night, May 23 by Miss Edith A. Gingrich. Considering the fact that the night was disagreeable because of a down pour of rain, a splendid audience was present. The splendid rendition of the numbers on the program showed that they were prepared with the utmost care. The program was beautifully and excellently presented, commensurate with the well-known ability of the participants.

Miss Gingrich was assisted by E. A. Spessard, '11, who sang two solos.

Prof. Schlichter, '97, will be here for Commencement.

Postponed

Unfortunately it has been impossible to make the necessary arrangements with the organizations in Harrisburg to distribute the flowers which the members of the "Wild Flower Club" expected to send to the hospitals and mission stations of that city during the coming summer, so that any organized effort in that direction will not be practicable this year. A delay in getting in touch with the right persons makes it impossible to properly organize the work before commencement. Arrangements will be made, however, so that next year the work may start promptly, and it is to be hoped that the interest manifested in this work, by the students, will continue until it can take some definite practical form.

Do not forget the motto, "Sunshine enough for all," and remember, too, that there will be innumerable opportunities to disseminate sunshine whether or not you are a member of an organization with that object in view.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AND EVENTS OF THE WEEK ATTRACT MANY*Hon. Franklin Spencer Edmonds, of Philadelphia, Delivers the Address to the Graduating Class on "Leadership in a Democracy"*

The forty-fifth annual commencement of Lebanon Valley College took place on Wednesday morning, June 7. The Honorable Franklin Spencer Edmonds, of Philadelphia, delivered the commencement address, his subject being, "Leadership in a Democracy." Mr. Edmonds is not only a fluent and forceful speaker, but his thorough knowledge of all phases of his subject and his broadness of that, make him not only an entertaining speaker but one who brings to his hearers some lesson of fundamental truth to carry away with them. The graduating class expected great things from Mr. Edmonds, and they were not disappointed.

His subject is one that is of vital importance to America as a nation, and particularly to the men and women who are in American colleges preparing for leadership. He impressed upon the mind of his hearers the importance of taking seriously the opportunities for becoming a leader among men, which a college course brings with it. As his first fundamental principle he insists that success consists in making one's self useful to his fellowmen, and that no one is successful who does not make society better by living in it. He showed that the American people demand certain characteristics in their leaders, and two of the essential qualities are, "Positive Honesty," and Efficiency." These are things in which the American people are advancing and they will not accept a man as their leader who does not possess them. The following are a few sentences that are characteristic of the whole address: "The man who does a deed that will make him afraid of public opinion, makes of himself a slave." "If you would win, you must study your subject as thoroughly as, or more thoroughly, than your opponent." "Go forth as a leader into the world just don't go forth to show your ignorance, don't play a game of which you know nothing." "Society is your problem, but your greatest problem is yourself. Do not take yourself for granted, if you do not fit into your place the trouble may be in you, and not in your place." "I urge you in your plan of life, that you will let the preaching of your daily life, speak to the world the things for which you should stand." After the address the diplomas were awarded and the degree conferred by President Keister. The following received the degree of Bachelor of Arts: W. A. Brunner, O. T. Ehrhart, W. O. Ellis, F. L. Frost, P. M. Holdeman, A. O. Kauffman, F. R. Kennedy, P. R. Koontz, J. K. Lehman, J. E. Marshall, R. B. Saylor, W. C. Shoop, E. A. Spessard, L. L. Spessard, S. G. Ziegler and A. M. Lindsay.

Senior Class Entertained

On Friday evening, June 2, President and Mrs. Keister entertained the Senior classes at the annual reception. The parlors and porches were tastefully decorated with plants and flowers. A white rose, the class flower of the Literary Senior Class, was given to each member of the class as a favor. Delicious refreshments were served. Besides the Senior classes, nearly every member of the faculty and a few other guests were present.

Academy Commencement

The third annual commencement of Lebanon Valley Academy was held Saturday evening, June the third. The chapel was decorated prettily with roses, pennants and crepe paper in green and white, their class colors. A large audience greeted the class. Each participant deserves praise for the program, which was as follows: Selection, Washington Band; President's Address, Samuel B. Groh; Two Piano Duett, "March Heroique," Mary Spayd and Ruth E. Engle; class History, Ruth V. Engle; Eulogy, Horace Mann, Ruth E. Engle; Trombone Solo, Harry M. Bender; Reading, "Night Run of the Overland," Helen Brightbill; Presentation, LaRene Engle; Vocal Duett, Helen Brightbill and Mary Spayd; Presentation of Diplomas by E. E. McCurdy; class song. Helen Brightbill received the scholarship. The class roll is as follows: Helen E. Brightbill, Harry M. Bender, LaRene R. Engle, Ruth E. Engle, Ruth V. Engle, Samuel B. Groh, Mary A. Spayd.

The Baccalaureate Sermon

President Keister preached a strong sermon to the graduating class and their friends, choosing for his subject, "How Joseph Became Prime Minister." Taking the story of Joseph's life he presented it in such a way, that his listeners, however conversant they may have been with the story, could not fail to see in it, new meaning and new truths, of which they had never before had any intimation. In his usual clear and logical way he demonstrated that the principles which made for greatness in the life of Joseph are the same principles that make for greatness in the life of any young man today. He emphasized the fact that there are two elements in life, the human and the divine, and that there are four methods of life: we may exalt the human to the exclusion of the divine; we may exalt the divine to the exclusion of the human; we may exalt both subordinating the divine to the human; we may exalt both subordinating the human to the divine. The last method is the one that brings greatness, the one that Joseph and all great and successful men followed. He also said that Joseph had demonstrated that it is not the problem of life to get a living or to gain a great name, but to build true characters and true manhood. The President's closing words to the class were full of inspiration and encouragement, emphasizing the fact that true nobility and greatness are within the reach of all who aspire and strive for them.

Union Campus Praise Service

The Union Campus Praise Service was held Sunday June 4, at 6 p. m. under the trees on the Campus under the leadership of S. O. Grimm. He read from the 145th and 146th Psalms for a scripture lesson. There was a good number present, among which were the seniors and a number of the faculty. The meeting was given mostly to the Seniors who gave their experience during their membership in the Y. M. C. A. and also left some advice and words of encouragement to the members who remain to continue the work next year. Several of the Alumni and members of the faculty gave inspiring talks. The meeting was full of interest, due somewhat to the pleasant atmosphere and surroundings of the open air meeting.

Address to Christian Associations

before the Christian Associations in the Engle Auditorium by Prof. C. B. Pennypacker, principal of the York High School, Sunday evening, June 4th. O. T. Ehrhart, '11, delivered the invocation and Dr. Keister read the scripture lesson and offered prayer. The choir, directed by Prof. Sheldon, rendered the music for the program which included two anthems. The offering of the evening will be devoted to sending young people to the summer conferences of the respective associations.

Prof. Pennypacker delivered a most interesting address upon the subject: "Fundamentals in Religion." His address attracted much notice and attention because it was the expression of the speaker's beliefs told in unvarnished language. The speaker presented the truth about religion as he was able to understand it from the laymen's point of view and not from that of the theologian. Consequently, the address was very well received by the fair sized audience present. When it was over, comments and differences of opinion were heard indicating that it had made an impression upon the hearers.

We can give but a very brief summary of the address: The fundamentals of religion are faith, hope and charity. We must not be Puritanic in our opinions about religion, but instead, should enjoy our religion as much as anything in life. Religion is the expression of the true, of the good, of the highest ideals of human experience. Religion is based upon the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God. It is useless for us to question the truths of the Bible or speculate whether science and the Bible agree, whether the world was made by God or according to the nebular hypothesis, or was created spontaneously. "I love the Church for the work it has done and I hope that it shall ever increase in power and efficiency."

In the church is the place for work and not out of it. But it is hard to get men into church. The obstacle in the way being the method of the church which is man-made. Everyone confessing a desire to cease to do evil and to do well instead should be admitted to the church. Religion and education always hold on to the old the longest. The church fails when it ignores the questions of the day. The Church is indifferent to intemperance and other institutions must take up the work.

Love, or charity, and not fear, is the greatest impelling force in religion. But many do not know the alphabet in charity. The Church fails to apply its action to practical ethics. The Church should aim to do the greatest good to the greatest number, but the Church is too largely controlled by worldly agencies. Through religious teachings we may find "the peace that passeth all understanding."

Commencement of Conservatory And School of Oratory

The annual exercises of the Conservatory of Music were held Monday evening June, 5, at 8:00. In conjunction with the graduates in Oratory a very creditable program was rendered. This was the first class graduating from the Oratory department. There were four graduates in music and three in oratory whose names will appear in the program. The program throughout was especially good. The numbers rendered by the graduates in music were heavy, displaying in technique and power of expression. The renditions by the graduates in oratory were as good as any we have heard this year. The program:

Invocation; Scherzvo, Op. 31, Edith Alice Gingrich; Silence, Nona Downey Hockenbury; Concert Etude, Op. 36, Elizabeth May Meyer; Monologue, entertaining a Neighbor's Child, Verda A. Snyder; Fantaisie, Op. 49, Ora Belle Bachman; My Last Duchess, John Wesley Ischy; a Aven, Carnival, Op. 9— b Marche des "Davidsbundler," Ruth C. Detweiler. The last number was the presentation of Diplomas by President Keister.

Class Day

The class exercises rendered on Tuesday afternoon were notable for originality and wit. The program was made up principally of three clever class songs and two class meetings, one representing the last one held in 1911 and the other one held twenty five years later. The songs, both

Lebanon Valley and Albright Divide Honors

L. V.-7 Albright-3

Lebanon Valley base ball team, accompanied by a large band of rooters, went to Myerstown on Memorial Day where they played two games with Albright. L. V. lost the morning game by the score of two to one. The second game was turned into a brilliant victory by the score of seven to three.

THE MORNING GAME

Albright opened up in the first inning. Foltz hit to E. Miller and reached second on his overthrow to Lehman. Kerner advanced Foltz to third when he grounded out, E. Miller to Lehman. J. Kelchner tripled to left scoring Foltz. Smoyer and Shuman struck out. Albright got their second tally in the second when Weaver scored on two successive errors.

During the remainder of the game Albright was not dangerous. Only four hits were netted from Little's delivery. Our "Muggsy" was there with the goods.. He struck out four of Albright's Sluggers. He did not give a single pass to first base.

L. V. got their only run in the fourth on Miller's home run. He hit to deep right and the ball was lost in the tall grass and he had crossed the plate before the ball was found. L. V. gathered up three hits from Weaver. Sensational fielding spoiled several runs for both sides. Lehman starred at first base. Dunlap played a star game in the field for L. V. In the fourth he made a sensational throw from center to home catching a runner at the plate. The score:

THE AFTERNOON GAME

At 3 p. m. the defenders of the blue and the white commenced the battle well prepared, and Albright met its Waterloo. This time it was to the tune of 7 to 3. Little was upon the mound for the second game of the day and dealt out to his opponents curves and drops sufficient to break their backs. Their was nothing to it but Lebanon Valley. Yost had to be taken out of the box and Weaver finished the game much against his inclinations. In both games Little gave Albright but ten hits.

We got our first run in the fourth inning when E. Miller singled and was advanced to third on an error. He scored on Smith's out to center. In the sixth, L. V. scored two more runs. Lehman opened with a single. Miller got to base on an error advancing Lehman to third. Both scored when Harnish double to center. Smith singled, but no runs were scored. In the seventh we scored four more runs. Loser opened with a slashing three bagger. Little scored him with a single. A. Miller singled. Lyter scored Miller and Little with a long home run. Lyter again lost the ball in the tall grass. Lehman, next up, hit a pretty two bagger but died on base. Yost was then replaced by Weaver from whom only one safe hit was made.

Yost made a poor showing in the box and was hit all over the field. Little pitched the second game for Lebanon Valley and was stronger in this contest than in the morning game. Only three hits were gathered from him.

Albright got two of the runs in the first inning when he reached first on an error. Kelchner drove him home with a homer. They scored another run in the ninth when Shuman singled, stole second, and scored when Kelchner got on base on an error.

Smith starred in the field for L. V., while the hitting honors were divided between Harnish, Loser, and Lyter. The score:

L. V. 9; Alumni 1

In the last game of the season Lebanon Valley defeated the Alumni in a listless game to the tune of 9-1. The Alumni had a galaxy of former stars and captains in their line-up, but were unable to find the elusive pillar shot over the pan by Little. Shaffer had their only hit on a Texas leaguer over third which should have been fielded. Stehman, Strock, Shaeffer and Koontz played classy ball for the Alumni, while Little and Lehman starred for the Varsity. Rutherford was hit hard and only the clever fielding behind him saved more runs from crossing the plate. Little did not have to exert himself during the game. In the third inning he struck out the side. Only twenty seven men faced Little in eight innings. Lehman continued his hitting. He added a three bagger and a home run to his credit. This brings him up to a total of two homers, six triples, two two baggers and four singles a total of fourteen hits in twelve games. He hit for a total of thirty four bases which puts him first in the percentage list of our batters. The score:

Base Ball Summary

The manager of the base ball team wishes to take this means to thank the fellows who so nobly assisted him through such a successful season. That the season has been a success goes without saying. The team won six games, tied two and lost four. One of the defeats was received at the hands of York Tri-State and was a very creditable score. In one of the two which were tied we should have had a victory, but bad umpiring was the cause of the tie. In no game except the York Tri-State game has any team scored over five runs. Following is a summary of the batting and fielding records of the various players:

	GAMES R H O. A. E.
Lyter.....	11 8 3 12 17 2
Lehman.....	11 6 12 10 9 4
Harnish.....	11 7 14 7 2 5
Smith.....	11 7 5 9 20 2
Dunlap.....	3 1 0 1 4 1
Carmany.....	10 9 5 20 15 11
Young.....	3 0 2 1 0 0
Loser.....	7 5 8 7 0 1
Hummel.....	6 2 4 4 3 0
E. Miller.....	3 3 5 4 8 3
A. Miller.....	7 9 9 45 10 0
Little.....	11 7 8 5 16 5
Totals.....	69 72 244 85 54

From the above summary one will see that Harnish leads in the number of hits, while Carmany leads in run getting. Lyter excelled in base running throughout the season. Lehman had the largest number of long hits to his credit. Among his twelve hits he had one home run, five triple's and two doubles. A. Miller and Lyter each had a home run.

Alumni

Paul Smith, '03, was in town recently visiting his father Paul P. Smith. Mr. Smith is connected with the Westinghouse firm in New York.

J. C. Strock, '10, was married last week to Minnie Emrich, of Lebanon.

Mr. Strock returned from his year's work in the West to go upon his honeymoon.

W. E. Harnish, '10, will again return to Cass City, Michigan, next year.

W. A. Brunner, '11, has secured a position at York, Pa., in the High School.

J. H. Sprecher, '07, late principal of Honey Brook Borough High School was elected principal of Parkesburg High School at a salary of $1000 per year. He is now looking for an assistant in his work.

The largest class at Lebanon High School was graduated this year under the supervision of Prof. E. M. Balsbaugh, '01. The Commencement exercises were very highly commended.

W. C. Plummer, '10, has returned from Beardstown, Ill., where he was teaching Mathematics, for the events of Commencement week.

H. H. Burd, '01, was elected principal of the central grammar school, Altoona, Pa. He was formerly ward principal and has received a good advance in salary.

words and music, were composed by Mr. Earle A. Spessard. These compositions all reflected great credit on their author who shows marked musical ability. After the singing of the March song, the president's address was delivered by John K. Lehman which was brimming over with cordiality and good will. The last class meeting as well as the one representing the reunion a quarter of a century hence provided a means of airing the jokes incident to the college life of the past year. Some of the costumes depicting the changes wrought in the several members in the period of twenty five years called forth great applause. At the conclusion of the program streamers of the class colors red and white came down over the class assembled in the center of the stage where they gave their class yell.

Oratorical Contest

- First Prize - Guy Wingerd
 Second Prize - J. W. Ischy
 Third Prize - A. S. Beckley

The annual Junior oratorical contest was held Tuesday evening at 8:00 in the Engle Auditorium. Six Juniors competed for the prizes. The following was the order of rendition:

Music, orchestra; Invocation; music, orchestra; "Truth and Dogma," Arthur S. Beckley; "The Boy With the Hoe," J. W. Ischy; Quartet; "The Life Superb," Josiah F. Reed; "The American Volunteer," Chester E. Rettew; Quartet; "The Ruins of Time," N. B. S. Thomas; "Our Perversion of Democracy," Guy Wingerd; Music, orchestra; Awarding of prizes; Music, orchestra.

The Judges of Delivery were: Rev. J. Leonard Hynson, Lebanon, Pa., E. D. Siegrist, Esq., Lebanon, Pa., Rev. D. Burt Smith, Hummelstown, Pa.

The Judges of Composition were—Prof. H. H. Baish, '01, Altoona, Pa., Rev. S. E. Rupp, Lebanon, Pa.

This was an unusually interesting contest. Each oration was prepared and delivered with such merit that it was difficult to determine which would be the victors. For one hour and a half one of the largest audiences at a similar occasion for a number of years, listened to the orators of the evening.

Mr. Beckley in "Truth and Dogma," presented his oration in a clear and forceful manner, holding the attention of the audience to the end. He brought out the dogmatic views of the old philosophers and also the truths which they presented. He showed how in Dogma alone it was practically a case of "The blind leading the blind." He pointed to the noble achievements of Columbus and Alexgreat thing in life. The Greeks and Romans had the best of culture but had no honor for themselves. The home is the place where the youth must get his ideals. It is only the real and genuine that stands the test of time.

Mr. Rettew in "The American Volunteer" brought out the longing for freedom of the original thirteen colonies so that when the critical time came there were many volunteers for the cause and the result was that the colonies became free and independent. Same was true in the Civil War. But such is no longer the case under our modern institutions permitting child-labor in factories and sweat shops. Throughout his oration he vividly presented the injustice and inhumanitarian consequences of that abominable practice.

Mr. Thomas in "The Ruins of Time" clearly presented the ruins of Empires and the reasons for and results of the same. The record of ages beholds its own destiny. As with triumphant time, so is it with man and Empire; they rise, flourish and pass away. The cities of Antiquity are buried under the ruins of time.

Mr. Wingerd in "Our Perversion of Democracy" raised the question whether our beloved republic was free from peril or not. He showed how the Pilgrim fathers founded our nation and gave us our free homes. He pointed out that law is the greatest thing and if we reject it we reject the basis of government. In states like Colorado, the state legislatures declined to follow the constitution and now mob law is substituted for the regular law. "Let us obey the law." He gave his oration in a forceful and convincing manner. His composition was good and his delivery won for him the prize.

The judges of the contest awarded the first prize of twenty dollars to Guy Wingerd, second prize of ten dollars to J. W. Ischy and the third prize of five dollars to A. S. Beckley.

A mistake was made in the announcement of the prizes which has here been corrected. The quartette composed of Messrs. Rodes, Klinger, Botts, and Hensel rendered two splendid selections with appropriate encores.

Commencement Number

This is therefore, the last regular issue of this volume of the "College News." As soon as this issue is off our hands we will set about clearing the editorial desk of all the rubbish that may have collected there and leave it clean and bright for the opening of the next year. Our service has been short, and in that time we have had our ups and downs, but we have profited greatly by the experiences of the last two months in editing this, the college paper. We have tried to give you, the readers, the best that our time, our ability, and our surrounding conditions would permit. We realize that we have failed in many respects for which we deserve and expect your criticism. If we have succeeded in others, we appreciate your commendation.

We wish to thank all who have been concerned in carrying through this year's production of this paper, the readers, the contributors to its columns, the editors, and the business managers. All have worked faithfully; especially is this true of several individuals. Especially do we express our gratitude to those who have offered us suggestions for the betterment of the paper during the year.

If we did not seem to take your suggestions in their entirety, don't be discouraged for there have been conditions of which you were not aware. We ask your interest and your help during the ensuing year.

When you have received this the last number, remember that our vacation has begun, and that school opens again in September when the "NEWS" will again take its place upon your reading list. If your subscription has expired or is unpaid, see to it immediately that the matter is attended to. We take our departure for the summer vacation.

The Alumni Banquet

The Annual Banquet of the Alumni Association was held on Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock in the dining hall of the Academy Building. Rev. I. E. Runk, '99, presided as Toastmaster and called for the following toasts "The class of 1911" responded to by E. A. Spessard. "Go Right On Working the Horse." responded by Prof. J. E. Lehman, '74, and "The Conservation of the Small College" responded to by Prof. C. H. Fisher, '04.

The following menu was served: Fruit a l'alumni, veal cutlet, creamed potatoes, green peas, cream sauce, salad, mayonaise Dressing wafers, punch, olives, Sandwiches, cheese, salted almonds, mints, ice cream, cakes, coffee.

Keims orchestra, of Lebanon furnished music for the occasion.

Oratory Dramatics

The Oratory Dramatics given Wednesday evening, consisted of three plays and music. The first play, a comedy "In Honor Bound" is a society play, serious and strong. The cast consisted of J. W. Ischy, who well took the part of a lawyer, Mrs. Hockenbury, his wife, Grace Smith, their niece, and Paul Koontz, her lover. The second play, "Queen Anne Cottages" is a farce. A boy and a girl run away in order to escape meeting at a dinner party. But they accidentally meet at a summer cottage. There are several cottages of the same kind so that complications occur. The owner of these cottages arrives and matters are somewhat arranged. The parts were taken by Carrie Light, Helen Weidler, V. D. Mulhollen, Rodes, Josephine Ulrich, and Ethel Daugherty. The third play, is an 18th century comedy. "Holly Tree Inn" is dramatized from Dicken's story of the same name. The story hinges upon two children, Verda Snyder and Helen Brightbill who have run away from home to be married. The children come to Holly Tree Inn, where the landlord and his wife, J. W. Ischy and Edna Yarkers keep them until the arrival of the boy's father, Russel Weidler. The maid and manservant are Miss Dubble and Mr. McConnel. All the characters are well taken. The casts have worked faithfully under the direction of Miss Adams. The music was in charge of Professor Sheldon. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the new stage.

Art Exhibit

The Art department has been open commencement week, for inspection. The work of the art department is very commendable and Miss Boehm, the head of the same, is to be congratulated for the fine results of her work. Miss Cook, one of the Art students has finished the most China work and readily shows the result of Miss Boehm's supervision.

Miss Adams Entertains

A delightful social function was held Monday evening at the close of the Music and Oratory Commencement exercises when Miss Adams entertained the members of the casts in the Wednesday evening Dramatic entertainment. A dainty luncheon was served and Miss Adams delighted her guests with several readings.

After the luncheon was served Miss Helen Brightbill presented to Miss Adams a beautiful bureau set consisting of a mirror brush and comb, from the members of the cast.

Those present were, Misses Grace Smith, Helen Weidler, Carrie Light, Josephine Ulrich, Ethel Daugherty, Helen Brightbill, Verda Snyder, Edna Yarkers, Anna Dubble, Mrs. E. J. Hockenbury, Messrs. J. W. Ischy, Victor Mulhollen, Lester Rhodes, Russel Weidler, Wm. McConnel and Paul Koontz.

George Guyer, ex '12, is spending commencement week among friends here.

'VARSITY MEN AND FACULTY ENTERTAINED

Thursday night, June 1, the Varsity base ball men, faculty and a few friends were very pleasantly entertained at the home of Prof. Shroyer. A number of speeches were delivered along the line of athletics in general, and upon the successful base ball season. After the discussions were ended, refreshments, agreeable to all, were served.

The evening was one full of pleasure to all.

Senior Recital by Ora Bachman

The fourth Pianoforte recital was given Thursday night, June 1, by Miss Ora Bachman. She was ably assisted by Miss Helen Brightbill who gave two readings. A good sized audience was present and showed their appreciation of the splendidly rendered numbers by their hearty applause. Miss Bachman received quite a number of very beautiful flowers from her many friends.

Items of Interest

H. S. Dunmire, formerly a student of L. V. C. conservatory has opened a studio at No. 338 North 9th Street, Lebanon. During the past year Mr. Dunmire has been a student of Mr. Leefson, now of Philadelphia and formerly of Amsterdam Holland. Mr. Leefson is considered by many the most artistic and technical instructor in Philadelphia; this is reflected in Mr. Dunmire's work, which is highly appreciated by students and parents of Lebanon, so that now his enrollment is nearing sixty.

Prof. Shenk gave the Memorial address at Palmyra, Decoration Day, May 30.

Mrs. J. M. Kerchner visited her daughter Maude, during the exercises of the week.

Mr. H. K. Kauffman, accompanied by his daughter, Belle, visited his son A. O. Kauffman, 11, during the past few days.

Mrs. W. K. Smith and son, Aldeu, were the guests of Grace N. Smith during commencement.

Rev. Z. A. Weidler, ex-student of the college was the guest of his son Russel and daughter Helen, during commencement.

Mark G. Holtzman, ex-student, was here attending the exercises of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ehrhart, Miss Mary Ehrhart, Catharine Ehrhart, Annie M. Tillman, of Millersville were the guests of O. T. Ehrhart, '11, during commencement.

Rev. P. R. Rodes, was the guest of his son Lester A. Rodes over commencement.

Rev. A. N. Horn, Enola, Pa., was the guest of his daughter Clara K., during commencement.

Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Koontz, of West Fairview, were the guests of their son Paul R., '11, during commencement week.

Prof. Shenk gave an address before the Annville High School Alumni at their annual banquet at the Hotel Wallace, Lebanon. His subject was the "Survival of The Fittest."

Deans' Resignation

Prof. H. H. Shenk, dean of the college for the past four years, has tendered his resignation as dean. He will remain as professor of History and Economics, and will devote his entire time to his departmental work.

Biological Laboratory

To the splendid equipment of the Biological Laboratory has been added a number of beautiful portraits of men famous in the scientific world, especially along the line of Biology. These portraits, appropriately framed, add much to the appearance of the department, and recall to one's mind that the study of Biology has advanced step by step and that in its ranks are found some of the greatest scientists of the world. These portraits have been made as enlargements from Prof. Lucy's Biology and Its Makers, by the permission of the author. The department is indebted to Alfred K. Mills, '04, for the generous gift.

Read

Having been misrepresented upon a recent occasion, I deem it just that I should correct any wrong impression that may exist.

As foot ball manager last fall, was instructed by the executive committee of the Athletic Association to purchase rope and stakes to rope off gridiron. The cost of said rope was $10, which was the lowest cost possible in order to meet requirements stipulated by aforesaid committee. Said stakes cost $2.10, including workmanship on same, and not the fabulous sum mentioned in the misconceived statement.

Moreover, I wish to state, that the schedule itself yielded $18.58 profit.

There was a balance of at least $175 in the treasury at end of season. Had the management been as represented, the base ball season would not have been possible. I am willing to furnish an itemized account of all receipts and expenditures of entire season. Same appears on treasurer's books, having been adopted by Executive committee.

In view of the many obstacles that could not be overcome and which forebear to enumerate because of certain worthy gentlemen concerned, but which are well known to the student body and others in general and all who have ever managed athletics at our college in particular, I deem the exaggerated statement as unjust and uncalled for.
